Guilford hosts fourth annual AIDS Summit

By Hannah Sherk

Last weekend marked the fourth annual AIDS Awareness Summit hosted by Guilford, an event infused with speakers and events geared to bring awareness to Guilford's campus.

"In your intimate relationships are you being safe?" said Visiting Assistant Professor of Sociology and Anthropology Martha Lang, who was the event's keynote speaker. "If you are not being safe you can change your unsafe behavior."

Lang felt the question was important to ask in light of the "condom shmondom" attitude embraced by many college students about protecting themselves during sexual intercourse.

The summit was organized by rising seniors Alethea Leventhal and Cordelia McKusick and Diamond D. Zephir, a rising junior. "This year's event was exactly what CAAP had wanted it to be," said Zephir, "It was an experience that had people questioning what they can do in their

Gibson now senate treasurer; wireless program initiated

By Rebecca Gibian
STAFF WRITER

As of Monday, April 12, Lamar Gibson is officially the newly elected treasurer of Senate.

"At this point the community is seeking a Senate they can trust," said Gibson in an e-mail interview. "I would like to be a part of this effort."

Gibson was nominated by Dana Hamdan, president-elect. "The WE ticket won the election two Fridays ago, Andre resigned last Sunday, and then we instated a motion to elect Lamar," Hamdan said at the Senate meeting on Monday. "We need a treasurer because we have budget meetings; it is an immediate concern."

During the meeting, the general consensus was that Gibson had the ability to step into the shoes of the treasurer and add a strong member onto the WE ticket.

When asked if people were displeased with the way the election was handled, Gibson responded, "Absolutely. Many people feel that this shows discord and dishonesty on the part of the WE ticket."

However, the newly complete WE ticket has high hopes for the future.
