Christ In The Home Subject Of Third Lenten Address

Bishop Rondthaler Declares that Home Life Is in Great Danger; Love for Each Other and For Christ Foundation of True Love

"Christ in the Home," was the subject of Bishop Rondthaler's third Lenten address at the Expanded Chapel House on Wednesday, March 23. Many stories from the lives of the courage of the men and the fortitude of the women during the Civil War. The lives of those who died are counted by their deeds rather than by their years. There is, Bishop said, another great war, the shadows of which are plainly discernible, a moral and spiritual war with the girls and women on the front line. This is the great home war.

Bishop stated that there is a great deal of crime connected with the breaking up of homes, but there is a new idea abroad among girls which is doing more than anything else to make unhappiness in homes. This idea is that the home is something of a hotel, merely a place to stay, while those who stay there, their interests outside, and it is doing more to wreck homes. God is issuing a call for girls to stand by their homes.

The example of Jesus Christ in the home of Mary, Martha, and Lazarus in Bethany shows how much He can mean to a family. Their work, tasks, self-dwelling employment, and meditation on the Word of God made joy and peace reign in their home.

A large shalod rock marks the entrance to Bethany where Martha, in her sorrow, came to Jesus. She told Him that Lazarus had died and recited the Savior's promise that He would live again. Martha's heart was convinced because she believed and trusted, so she went to call Mary. Mary was more emotional than Martha, and Christ dealt with her according to her nature. He asked her where her brother was buried and was led to the grave. Though He knew that He could raise Lazarus, out of sympathy for the sisters' faith, sorrow, Jesus wept. He had the tomb opened and called Lazarus to come forth, and he rose and stood again alive and well.

Resurrections do not take place now, but the stories of them are told to show that comfort, support, and all that is needed can be found in Jesus. Along with many perplexity, sorrow, loss, or worry is a home where Jesus has entered, will come comfort.

Another time when Jesus was in Bethany was at the home of the rich relative of Mary, Martha, and Lazarus. Mary seemed to know that this was her chance to show her love most gratefully. She entered the room, bringing with her a precious vase holding a pound of balsam, broke the stopper and poured the ointment on the Savior's feet. A bit was left in the alabaster bottle, so she crushed it and poured the rest drop by drop on his feet.

Unselfish work, prayer, and Bible reading are important elements in the home, but love should be the foundation. A Christian home founded on love for each other and for the Savior will always be safe and beautiful.

After Mary's beautiful deed, Jesus commended her for it, and promised that she should always be remembered for her great love. Love that comes from faith in Christ is immortal love, and if it comes into homes, they will stand in the next generations as they have stood in the past.

In closing his address, Bishop asked that each girl consecrate her self to her home and to her Savior.

Junior Vaudeville Night Offers Variety Program

Real Talent Displayed in Varied Stunts; Musical Very Realistic

Monday evening, March 28, at 8:30 o'clock, the Juniors presented a delightful and entertaining vaudeville. From start to finish the acts proved to be very amusing, and offered quite a variety in entertainment. In the first act Rebecca Peterson, as Madame Tani, displayed her ability as a mind reader by mysteriously reading and correctly answering questions which the audience asked.

In the second act Ruth Platt, dressed in East Side fashion, featured "The Black Bottom," and Virginia Welch and Pauline Berkeley, wearing farmer boys' costumes, entertained the audience with a clag dance.

A one-act play, "Ends in a Cleft," was then given by Peggy Brooks, Sara and Elizabeth Dowling, Cordelia Shaner, and Anne Graham Caldwell. The play was well acted, and was thoroughly enjoyed by the entire audience.

In the next act, Dorothy Frazier, a popular young pianist, received much applause. She not only played several very difficult piano selections, but also accompanied by Elizabeth Sifferd at the piano, played several selections on the saxophone. In the following act Salem's famous black comedians, including Jane Little, Elizabeth Wilson, Joy Bowers, Rose Frazier, Letitia Currie and Mary Brooks, Sara and Elizabeth Dowling, successfully appeared, and succeeded in keeping their audience in an uproar of laughter.

The concluding act, "A Young Man's Dream," gave just the variety that was needed to make the vaudeville a successful entertainment.

Hampton Quartet Presents Program

Group of Negro Spirituals Well Rendered by Graduates of Hampton Institute

The Hampton Institute Quartet, under the auspices of the Colored Y. W. C. A., gave a delightful program of negro spirituals in Memorial Hall Saturday night, March 20. Probably the most appealing of all the songs which were rendered were the well-known "Standing in the Need of Prayer," "Go Down Moses," and "Swing Low, Sweet Chariot," the last one being repeated as an encore. The entire program was as follows:

When the Stars begin to fall
Roll, Jordan, roll,
I've been listening all the day long
Sometimes I feel like a motherless child.

Standing in the need of prayer.
Way in the middle of de air.
You gonna reap just what you sow.
Go down Moses.

Lord, I done got my sword in my hand,
Take me home as you used to do
Baptist, Methodist, Presbyterian,
I couldn't hear nobody pray.

Deep River
See four and twenty elders on their knees
Swing Low, Sweet Chariot

It is interesting to know that the members of the quartet train themselves. They go off in a room where they won't be disturbed and work out the harmonies for their songs. These men are graduates of Hampton, and at present cash has a certain track at the school.

There was no admission fee, but a silver offering was taken, the proceeds of which was given to the work of the Institute.

Chinese War Is Real Menace To World Peace, Says Mr. Long

Russian Military Leaders Training the Cantonese Army; Safety of British and Americans In China At Stake

"The present situation in China is one of the most vital problems in world affairs today. If China turns Bolshevistic under the leadership of Russia, a real menace will confront that section of the universe, and eventually the entire world. The ultimate result of conditions in the East now, will be the withdrawal of all foreigners from Chinese territory." Mr. Harry W. Long, head of the Physical Education Department, in an interview with a Salem reporter, gave a graphic picture of the present situation in the East. Mr. Long was in Petrograd immediately following the World War, and is well acquainted with the Bolshevick movement in that country, and their methods of propaganda.

Mr. Long stated that the Bolshevicks are responsible for the contention now evident in China, and are using the ignorant and illiterate minds of China as a means for the promotion of their own interests.

The present condition dates back to the Boxer War when concessions were granted to the British and Americans, and sections of Shanghai and other large cities were given to the foreigners for settlement. The Chinese are now permeated with a nationalistic spirit, and they are reviving against foreign control. Foreigners own the monopoly on mining, on all wells, on harvest machines, and numerous other commodities. The Bolshevicks have seized this dissatisfaction among the Chinese against foreign control, and have turned it into the accomplishment of their own ends—a civil war, an overthrow of government, and a new country added to their interests.

There are two political parties in China today that are fighting primarily for the same thing, but in reality against each other. The northern party is the recognized one, but the Bolshevicks are apparently unable to win over the confidence of the leader of this party. The Southern or Cantones party, with headquarters at Canton, formed the most fertile soil for Bolshevick propaganda, and it is this party, with headquarters at Canton, formed the most fertile soil for Bolshevick propaganda, and it is this party, with headquarters at Canton, formed the most fertile soil for Bolshevick propaganda.

Marshal Chiang, leader of the Cantones group, stated that he does not mean to attack the foreign settlements, but with a Chinese army—there is no leader powerful enough to mean to attack the foreign settlements, but with a Chinese army—there is no leader powerful enough to mean to attack the foreign settlements, but with a Chinese army—there is no leader powerful enough to mean to attack the foreign settlements.

The foreigners enjoy special privileges in their city within the Chinese city they have their own fire department, their own police and courts, their own educational institutions.

Academy Seniors Championship

Final Score 17-14; Brilliant Playings Displayed on Both Sides; Faculty Team Announced

The final game of the Academy basketball championship was played Monday, March the twenty-eighth. The early lead of the Seniors gave them a clean-cut victory over the Faculty, the score being seven to seven.

The Juniors, who had defeated the Seniors in the preliminary game, were unable to get much headway in the first part of the game. The Seniors displayed a great deal of size and made good use of every opportunity to score. The first stage of the game ended with the Seniors to four in favor of the Seniors.

The renewed vigor of the winning team in the second half of the game showed the losers that they must begin action or the battle would be a one-sided affair. Virginia Harris, the star of the Junior team, was ousted from jumping center to forward and then the real action began.

In the fourth quarter with the score fifteen to four in favor of the Seniors, the opposing team put forth some effort to win the game, but probably would have done so had the game lasted a few minutes longer. The play of both teams was clean and brilliant.

On Monday night a banquet for the teams was given. During the show of the dinner, the teams and the teams toasted their respective

The leading role was taken by Doris Little. Others taking part were Virginia Harris, Daisy Litz, Doris Kissel, Frances Maloney, Ruth Kennedy, and Margaret Henderson.
