DO YOU SEE THE GOOD OR THE BAD?

OR THE BAD?

There is so much good in the world that if one made a point of searching for it, one would be surplised to find that it almost completely obscures the evil that sets itself over against it. This sounds improbable; but the few who try the "seeing good in everything and everybody" method testify to fits truthfulness and say that the practice pays, while those who take an opyone of the had that crists in the world and in their fellow-men are such distillusioned, ill-favored speciments that one puts little faith in their conclusions. Do not be blind to evil; recognize its evistence,—but the conclusions. Do not be blind to evil; recognize its evistence,—but does not have at least one bright does not have at least one bright to you. Why not look for the good in people instead of the evil? You will be much happier—and the BROAD INTERENTS
