WASHINGTON'S JOURNEY

the president. On the last day of May the presidential party set out for Salem. Dr. Rondthaler gave a vivid description of the welcome that Washington received upon his arrival at Salem. The Moravian Church band, and practically every person in the small town were at the Inn to greet him. The band played "God Save Great Washington" as he drove up in front of the Inn. Washington was greatly impressed with the Moravian village, and took much interest in visiting the Moravian church, the Sisters' House, the Single Men's Home, and the work shops. Dr. Rondthaler had in his possession the original copy of the welcome of the people of Salem, and Washington's reply to them. After spending the night in Salem, Washington left early the next morning for Guilford, and from there he continued his journey back to Washington.

Dr. Rondthaler's address was one of the most interesting that has been delivered at Salem, and it is to be hoped that he will see fit to continue it in detail at an early date.

Something About Volleyball and Soccer

In about three weeks the final volleyball games are to be played. Of course each class will participate and will be represented by a team; but how good a team? Don't forget that, no matter how valuable an experienced a player you are, you won't be given an opportunity to display your technique on the field unless you have been out for the required two-thirds percent of the practices. It is not too late, even if you have not yet practiced any, so be sure to get out sometime between 4 and 5:30 o'clock on Tuesday afternoon. Your class needs you and now is the time to evince your loyalty, even as you did during basketball season. Remember that a general volleyball practice, for freshmen, sophomores, juniors and seniors is held every Tuesday and every Thursday afternoon. Nobody's nor music hour need interfere with your practice, because the period lasts until five thirty.

By the time the last volleyball game of the year has been won, the soccer teams should have attained no slight degree of skill, since the allotted time for the two sports overlaps, and soccer coaching has been under way for several days.

This is the first year in the athletic records of Salem that a complete soccer season has been planned. Therefore it is especially imperative that each class shall raise its quota for a team, so that this new sport may be successfully established. The preliminary practices were begun on Wednesday, February 22, and will be held during the ensuing two weeks, for all classes, on Wednesday and Friday afternoons from 3:30 till 4:30. For the month following, concentrated individual class practices have been scheduled, four each week (on Tuesdays, Wednesdays, Thursdays, and Fridays). Specific periods for freshmen, sophomores, juniors and seniors will be announced and posted later. It should not be considered an attempt at invidious inducement to mention that the soccer season will be terminated with a banquet, just before Easter.

Needless to say nevertheless perhaps repetition will serve as a plan—it is desirable for all the girls who are not actually disabled or anemic to take part in volleyball and soccer. If you are ignorant of the rules of the games, know that a long-suffering but dauntless coach is both ready and willing to teach you. It should embarrass the upper-classes to learn that a larger percentage of freshmen than of sophomores, juniors or seniors, are manifesting interest in the post-Christmas athletic activities. It should amuse them and arouse them to action, but does it? Will it?

"I adore you, kid."

Productive Scholarship

New York, N. Y. (By New Student Service)—Two months after the publication of his second novel, "The Bridge of San Luis Rey," Thornton Wilder's book has become a collector's item, and is being held at a premium. The idea for the novel, Wilder told a reporter for The Daily Princetonian, "came to me while I was studying for an M. A. in French at the Princeton Graduate School. It was in a course conducted by that admirable man Professor Louis Cons that I received the suggestion for the first sketch in the book."

Although Wilder believes the literary trend toward emotionalism is "admirable," he thinks "there is one fact that people are affecting which seems to me to be harmful—collecting first editions. This is hardly a way to express one's admiration for books, but rather a minor indication of an age that is losing the essential approach to them. It reminds me of the type of interest they had in old Alexandria, the city that was a library, where books ceased to be a vehicle of conviction, a comment on experience, or the expression of an attitude toward living."

Students And Religion

Columbus, Ohio (By New Student Service)—Ohio ministers in convention at Ohio State University were somewhat disconcerted when university students whom they had invited to present undergraduate views on religious leadership, became truly critical. Ministers, the students said, pose as final authorities and never admit they do not know, fail to discuss frankly, sincerely, willingly and intelligently the most vital problems of life, and talk at, rather than with, their followers. At first the ministers rose in protest and wanted to give battle. After a lively meeting the clerics agreed to wait until all the student criticisms were in before making their defense.

Helene—"What are you thinking about?"
 Gertry—"Nothing."
 Helene—"Don't be so self-centered."
