

BOOK REVIEW

Life on the high seas, in New York and Long Island was exciting in and about 1812, especially with a beautiful girl in the offing.

Lion Fellows, through shipwreck and divers other mischances, meets Cara Ingelina, of Portugal and New York, and ships as mate on her father's boat. He is "pressed" into the service of the British captain Collishaw, at whose bidding he suffers the indignity of the cat-o'-nine tails. Hate and the desire for revenge on both Collishaw and a Carra (whom he suspects of having a finger in the pie), drive him on to escape, fit up a boat of his own and sail forth after the pair of them. Revenge comes to him after many adventures; Carra is his prisoner, Collishaw is killed; and both their ships are burned.

But revenge turns out to have a bitter taste, and when it gives way to love everything grows much nicer. It turns out that Carra loves him, too, though it is hard to see why. There is excitement here in the sea-battles, and novelty in the fact that there have not been many books concerning the high adventurous war of 1812; but outside of these two points of interest the book is nothing extraordinary.

THE STRANGE CASE OF MISS ANNIE SPRAGG

By Louis Bromfield "On the surface, there appears to be nothing which might indicate that Miss Annie Spragg was any thing but an eccentric old maid of the kind found frequently enough in small towns and religious communities," concluded Mr. Winney.

But, having read the story, one feels that her eccentricity would hardly provoke a rather reserved spinster to dance, clad only in a crown of leaves, with a pet black goat in the forest. No, we just can't quite agree with Mr. Winney.

This Bromfield novel contains an almost Dickensian array of character. The round dozen of them vie with Miss Annie in the possession of peculiarities. The motives and even some of the incidents are only suggested so that, at the end, while the reader is clearly able to understand the situation, he feels somewhat in the dark as Mr. Winney did in his lists of conclusions regarding the case.

HE IS HIS OWN GRANDFATHER!

Can You Figure This Out? It's The Truth.

A man was visiting a lunatic asylum and while walking in the grounds he met a patient to whom he said: "Well how did you get here?"

The man replied: "Well sir, you see I married a widow with a grown-up daughter, and then my father married my wife's daughter, and that made my wife the mother-in-law of her father-in-law, my father became my step-son. Then my step-mother, the daughter of my wife had a son, and that boy, of course, was my brother, because he was my father's son, but he was also the son of my wife's step-daughter and therefore her grandson, and that made me grandfather of my step-brother.

Then my wife had a son, so my mother-in-law, step-sister of my son, is also his grandmother, because he is the step-son's child; my father is brother-in-law of my wife; I am the brother of my son, who is also the son of my step-mother; I am my mother's brother-in-law; my wife is her own child's aunt; my son is my father's nephew, and I am my own grand-father.

"That's why I am here, sir." The Twigg.

"Where are you going?"

"Trying to find out where the pigmeo line is."

"What for?"

"Want some holes for my desk."

Men Needed

"Only alert, progressive men can spend money intelligently and economically for new things," declares Charles Belknap, president of the Merrimac Chemical company in the Magazine of Business. "When the man at the top has an idea, his work has just begun. He alone cannot put a new view into reality. In fact, by himself, he cannot even achieve a new view that will also be safe."

H's Wheel-Chair Auto

A Denver man, almost helpless from paralysis, gets fresh air and exercise riding around in a wheel chair propelled by electric motor. His average speed is seven miles an hour. At night he attaches the storage battery in the chair to an electric light socket and by morning it is charged again ready for another ride. A little ingenuity can make a world of difference in your environment.

Truthful Fisherman

They're telling a story about a fisherman who tried the brooks the other day without making a catch. As he was about to start for home he ran across a youngster who had a whopping big trout dangling from the end of a string. The boy refused to sell the fish and the fisherman gave him a dime for allowing him to measure the trout so he could truthfully tell his friends how big the fish was that got away from him.

Finds Average Man and Woman Is Kind-Hearted

A woman writer from the New York World got herself a peddler's license and went out on the street to make a test of New York's charity and gullibility. She found the average man and woman kind-hearted and unsuspecting—that stenographers are the most generous people in New York. "The police didn't bother me," she reports, "unless I caused a commotion. I tied up traffic on Broadway three times because of the curiosity of onlookers. New York is more generous by day. By night when I peddled the white-light district I aroused curiosity rather than sympathy. Broadway crowds are somewhat cautious. . . . Begging is not allowed in New York beyond a certain dead line. This woman "beggar" found when she crossed that line the police didn't see her, indicating the presence of a heart under the uniform.

Da Vinci Regarded as Greatest of Anatomists

Specialists reading the notes of Leonardo da Vinci have been astonished at the accuracy of the Italian's knowledge of the arts and sciences. At least one noted surgeon has called Da Vinci the greatest anatomist. A reason is to be found in the notebooks of the painstaking painter, sculptor and man of science, where about the beginning of the sixteenth century he wrote:

"In order to obtain an exact knowledge of these [his anatomical drawings] I have dissected more than ten human bodies, destroying all the various members and removing even the very smallest particles of the flesh which surrounded the veins without causing any effusion of blood other than the imperceptible bleeding of the capillary veins. And, as one single body did not suffice for so long a time, it was necessary to proceed by stages with so many bodies as would render my knowledge complete; and this I repeated twice over to discover the differences."

Must Know Rural Sociology

The training of rural school teachers is not greatly different from the training of any other teacher. The technique of teaching reading is exactly the same in the rural school as in the village school, and this applies to all other subjects.

The social atmosphere of the rural school is somewhat different from that of the village school and always will be. The teachers in the rural school should understand and appreciate rural sociology.—Successful Farming.

Tree Can Shade 7,000

Probably the largest oak tree in the world is the Hooker oak which stands in Chico, Cal., and probably has been standing there for at least 1,000 years, according to the Farm Journal. It is more than 100 feet high, its longest branch extends 105 feet from the trunk, and the spread of its branches in spots is more than 200 feet. It is the tree under which Gen. W. T. Sherman estimated 7,000 men could stand in the shade.
