

SOCIETY REVELS

On Thursday evening, April the eighteenth, Miss Mary Brewer celebrated her sixteenth birthday by flinging a wild party (as they do in the cinema) in her luxurious apartment, 306 Junior Hall, Salem College Place. The smart collegiate contingent were assembled in gala attire and formed a multicolored panorama reminiscent of the famed Potemkin establishments (See Vogue, 98, 99, 100, etc.).

Guy Lombardi's Royal Canadian furnished music for the affair, and of course dancing was one of the prime diversions of the evening. Miss Brewer's originality outdid itself on this occasion when she caused quite a furor by making her appearance not until twelve o'clock when she emerged from the center of an enormous fan-like lighted cake—with sixteen golden candles on it—all dressed in a gleaming costume of gold. Then, in the glow of a blue and gold spotlight, she danced on the top of the huge frosted cake—her newest specialty, The Dance of the Seven Cocktail Shakers. Her guests well nigh deafened her with their appreciative applause.

As favors the guests received carved cigar cigarette cases. Also, as a part of the ceremony in several of the famous games which were played, they were festooned with attractive trifles, such as rhinestone tiaras, garlands of orchids, etc.

Besides the constant flow of refreshment which was found at the black marble bar (Burgundy, Four Roses, Scotch, Gordon's Gin, Bacardi, etc.), a delicious eight-course supper was served at the far-famed King Arthur table, in the Moonlight Room.

The guests numbered around four hundred.

N. C. C. P. A. MEETS IN GREENSBORO

The seventeenth semi-annual conference of the North Carolina Collegiate Press association convened at Greensboro College for Women, Greensboro, N. C., on Thursday, Friday and Saturday of this week, April 18 to 20. Greensboro College, host to the association, will be assisted by her sister and rival institution—N. C. C. W. in the entertainment of the visiting representatives from the various colleges of the state.

During the convention four much coveted loving cups will be awarded to the best judged publications in their respective fields in the state during the past year—one to the best college newspaper, one to the paper producing the best editorials for the year, one to the best college Yearbook, and one to the best college literary magazine during the year.

The Press Association met at Duke University last year, at which time H. L. Hester, then editor of the Chronicle, was president of the association. Last year the Chronicle, for the second consecutive year, was awarded the cup offered for the best college newspaper in the state. The Duke Archive, judged the best literary magazine, was the recipient of the award in that field. The 1927 number of Pine Needles, N. C. C. W. annual received the decision as the best Year book.

The officers of the Press Association, who were elected at the meeting here last spring are: Walter Spearman, of Carolina, president; Miss Katie Gravelly, N. C. C. W., first vice-president; Charles Pratt, Davidson, second vice-president; Miss Alice Dowd, Meredith, secretary; and A. S. Parker, Guilford, treasurer.

light. It was said that the decree of Caesar Augustus concerning taxation was untrue, but a few years ago proofs were unearthed which showed that there had been such a decree. Mrs. Roan says, "God has not left himself without a witness, but by the spade of the archaeologist He has made Himself known."

SPRING FEVER

With flowers blooming on the campus and with the birds singing in the budding trees, the languor characteristic of many young women through the whole year and of others at various periods has had a tendency to grow in its proportions during the past few days. Spring is undoubtedly here, and so it seems is spring fever.

"We are certainly nothing wrong about wandering through the sun-flecked woods of April, or in standing on the warm street corners of the city watching for new spring hats, provided the day's work has been carried out to a degree which would make pleasures unaccompanied by any qualms of calling duty. The importance of silencing those bells before the pleasant pounce is engaged in, however, should not be under-rated. To be able to recall at will the main features of tomorrow's lessons is a fine thing and lends a stimulus to springtime indulgences.

In April, there is a fine opportunity for the training of the will. To study when one does not want to study is a fine thing, and one which bears fruit in double proportion. The lesson is learned and the spirit which "I will" is strengthened. Such an opportunity to develop character by means of overcoming great obstacles should not be given a thought before it is neglected.

Knitting Craze Sweeps Through Smith College

Northampton, Mass.—A knitting craze has broken out like an epidemic at Smith college.

The more severe manifestations are as yet confined to dormitories, but it is feared that campus and classrooms may yet feel the effects of the sweep. In its wake are found such utilitarian articles as sweater suits, rather than the more strictly domestic comfort.

The most desolate locality in the stricken houses is the dining room. Students, according to a newly passed regulation, are not allowed to bring their knitting to meals, lest, perchance, the yarn become confused with the food, it said, including that food with the Italian name.

The Victorian pastime is explained by the victims, not as a return to naive artlessness, but as a triumph of sophistication.

Women Hunters Into Carolina Preserves

North Shell Island, S. C.—Capt. W. D. Gaskill, who owns a shooting lodge on this island, is making preparations to install facilities here for visiting sportswomen.

For a great many years the Pamlico sound on the coast of North Carolina has been visited by sportsmen who come here for goose, duck and brant shooting. This season the gathering has been augmented by a number of prominent sportswomen from the northern states.

A group of hunters have notified Captain Gaskill that they expect to bring their wives here next season if he will make arrangements to accommodate them.

The average woman undoubtedly utters more words per minute over the telephone than the average man. But, according to Dr. J. C. Steinberg of the Bell Telephone Laboratories, she talks less distinctly. Dr. K. S. Johnson of the same concern comments that the sounds "th," "f," and "v" are always difficult to hear, their blurring accounting for more than half the errors made during present day commercial telephoning.

Game Warden: "Hey, young man, what's the idea of hunting with a last year's license?"

Biles: "Oh, I'm only shooting at the birds I missed last year."

MISS MARGARET JOHNSON GIVES RECITAL

played by Miss Johnson with Dean Vardell at the organ.

Ernest Schofield, head of the voice department at Salem College, assisted Miss Johnson. His rich baritone voice was especially beautiful in Bassant's stirring "Vision Fugitive." The plaintive old Scotch melody "Turn Ye to Me," and the tender pathos of "In My Attic" made a deep appeal to the audience. "The Victor," by Karn, brought Mr. Schofield's group to a triumphant close.

Miss Viola Tucker, a valuable addition to the faculty of the school of music accompanied Mr. Schofield in a most artistic manner.

Caustic Criticism of Present-Day Mothers

"We may talk all we choose about how the world has changed, how civilization has advanced, and so on, but the fact remains that the fundamentals have not changed one whit," declared Bishop Beatty in an address.

"Today, just as it has been down through the ages, the future of the race depends upon the mothers of the present. I fear for the future because of these present-day mothers. They leave the children too much to themselves and the lack of proper guidance is developing deplorable conditions.

"Too many mothers are like Mrs. Blank of Park avenue, who called her maid to her one day and said: "'Hi, look out the window. Is that child mine or does it belong to some neighbor? It's been hanging around here all day!'"

Drugs in Modern Use Familiar to Ancients

Thirty per cent of the drugs used by modern medicines were known to remote antiquity, reveals Dr. Charles Singer in his book "A Short History of Medicine," published by the Oxford University Press.

The Egyptian medical papyrus, mentions, among other drugs, he writes, "Aloes, caraway, castor oil, coriander, dill, fennel, juniper, mint, myrrh, and turpentine. Among Egyptian mineral remedies still in use are salts of copper and lead. Assyrian medical tablets refer to most of the Egyptian drugs as well as to a number of others, among which are almond oil, aniseed, galbanum and licorice. Among Assyrian remedies that are used to this day are alum and bitumen." Early Indian medicinal herbs are also still in use in scientific medicine, according to Doctor Singer
