

The touch of human hands— That is the boon of day; For groping, day by day, Along the stony way, We need the comrade heart That understands, And the warmth, the living warmth Of human hands.

The touch of human hands— Not the vain, unthinking words, Nor the cold charity, Which slurs our misery; We seek a loyal friend Who understands, And the warmth, the pulsing warmth Of human hands.

The touch of human hands— Such care as was in Him Who walked in Galilee, Bared the silver sea; We need a patient guide Who understands, And the warmth, the loving warmth Of human hands.

—Thomas Curtis Clark.

It is indeed a privilege and a pleasure to have the state Y. W. and Y. M. C. A. Conference meet with us. In past years we have sent delegates to the annual conference and they have invariably come back with inspiring reports of their achievements of the conference. As the meeting is at Salem this year we have the opportunity for all old and new cabinet members to attend instead of a restricted number of delegates as it would have to be if the meeting were elsewhere. It will be a pleasure to have this group of workers with us for we are all working for the same goal, and having this in common the problems, pleasures, thoughts and ideals are equally the same. As a result mutual understanding should come and with the combined efforts of such a group, why should not the organization of the "Y" be carried several paces forward toward its idealistic goal.

Cabinet members should receive a great help from a meeting with such eminent leaders as we have been fortunate enough to secure. This year, when planning the program, the committee felt that some time during the conference should be devoted to Cabinet work and workers.

Monday morning, it was decided, would be the best time, and Mr. C. B. Loomis, the best leader. New Cabinet members should especially urge to attend this meeting. It is often difficult for girls who have never been in "Y" work before to get the true spirit unless they learn something about the great work this organization is doing and the high ideals for which it stands. It is with regret that the old Cabinet members move out into the world and leave this field of work and they are extremely anxious that the new girls should take up the work and carry it forward. They have felt the lack of adequate training for the great field and hope that the incoming Cabinet workers will take advantage of this great opportunity for help and guidance.

"Who's that behind us, Fred," asked the man at the wheel as a car looted.

"Only a flapper in a roadster," Fred answered.

The driver hurled his wheel over, swerved the car off the road, crashed through the fence and turned turtle.

"Thank heavens we escaped!" he muttered.

SPORTS

Ready? Serve! Those two expressions and other exclamations of tennis are the by-words of today. The tennis singles tournament has progressed far enough along its course so that only the very skillful players are left. Soon there will be only two left in the fight, and then one, and that one will be the winner of the trophy. Who will she be? Come down to the courts and pick out the best players, then place your bets! Immediately after the singles tournament is finished the doubles tournament will begin.

The baseball championship will be decided Monday afternoon at four-thirty. If you know your baseball you will remember that last year the upper classmen with the help of the Sophomores beat the Freshmen by (better not said exactly) a large number of runs. This year the Juniors and Seniors will play the winners of the Sophomore-Freshman game. Can they keep up last year's record, can they win without the aid of the Sophomores? If you are to find out just come down to the field on Monday afternoon. You are guaranteed to see, if not a big league game, at least a very supply of hits and runs and errors.

Howard Rondthaler at Leisure

Howard Rondthaler really is a likeable fellow—when you know him. We had the privilege this week to get out with him and, as our dear Editor would say, "gambol on the green." Seizing this unique opportunity we called him "Howard," most familiarly, at every turn. We took him out to the lawn, put him on the grass and rolled him about among the lovely clover. How he chuckled and squealed with glee. He looked so very sweet in that nice blue suit he has, that he was almost too enticing even to us well-greaved Achaean and horse-taming Trojans. Soon after we arrived at his home he came toddling, uncertainly, out upon the porch devouring some drink he'd just had in the kitchen. He was in the most hilarious mood. You know a drink affects some people that way. Others become moody. All the afternoon Howard laughed outrageously at our jokes although, somehow, we felt that he didn't know what it was about. He rode about most of the afternoon in a toy rod car all up and down the porch. He was, well what would you say if you saw Mr. Howard Rondthaler riding around in a red Kiddie-Kar on a bright Spring afternoon?

We were really shocked at his exceedingly gay conduct, especially before Dr. Willoughby, so we took him out on the lawn and talked him back into calmness. We had to get the cat for him because he seemed to have formed an unusual attachment for that kitty.

It was a hard and gay afternoon for the gentlemen and so he was coaxed to bed about six, having had his supper in the kitchen. This really isn't an expose but we thought everybody would like to have an authentic account of Howard at leisure and off his guard. As we said he's a likeable fellow—all of which is due to a great extent to his mother Alice and his grand-daddy Howard.

Paper From Corn

As early as 1765 a German, Jacob Schaeffer, called attention to Indian corn as a possible source of paper. The first American patent on paper to be made from corn was taken out in 1802 by B. Allison and J. Hawkins for a process of making paper out of corn husks. Twenty years ago the Department of Agriculture conducted extensive experiments on paper making with cornstalks and carried the work into actual mill operation.

Sound Effects

A lady motorist whose car had swerved across a street and crashed through a plateglass window was being questioned by the local police sergeant after the accident.

"Surely on such a wide street as this," said the interrogator, "you could have done something to prevent this accident?" "I did," the delinquent assured him quite earnestly; "I screamed as loud as I could!"

Complimentary

A man who fancied himself as a motor engineer bought a second-hand car, and had just completed one or two urgent repairs. He stepped back and surveyed his handiwork.

"There!" he exclaimed to a friend, "you'd never think she was second-hand now, would you?"

His friend cast a critical glance over the car before replying, "No," he agreed; "it's more like something you'd made yourself!"
