JUNIOR TEA
Among the social events of freshman week was the Junior Tea given in honor of the Freshmen on Monday afternoon, September the sixteenth. The little sisters, escorted by their "big sisters," were received

NEW CAMPUS BUILDINGS TO BE ERECTED SOON

plan of an enlarged colonial plant will be known as the Louise P. Biting Building.
Back for the new Salem Academy plant are expected to be let on the opening day of school, 1929, after which construction will be immediately begun, and the new building will be ready for occupancy by September, 1930.

Three new buildings, memorials to respected Salem alumnae, Mary Fries Patterson, Carrie Fries Shaffner, and Emma Fries Bahnsen, and gifts of the children of these sisters, will be erected on the east side of Salem campus, upon "the hill" beyond the Pleasure Grounds.

After spending some time studying the architectural style of old Salem, Mr. Hobart Upjohn, well known architect of churches, and schools, designed the buildings, which in every detail carry out the artistic colonial styles which prevail about Salem Campus.

Two of the three buildings will be used as dormitories, the first housing fifty-six students and the second fifty-eight. Besides having comfortable bedrooms equipped with hot and cold water, the first building will enclose a small kitchenette and dining room for class parties, a parlor and locker room for day students, a laundryette and, in the wings, the heating plant and incinerator. The second dormitory will have the dining room, with a seating capacity of one hundred and fifty, and the kitchen, with every convenience, including refrigeration and pantry on the first floor.

The middle building of the group, known as Mary Patterson Building, will be devoted to administrative and teaching purposes. In the building on the first floor will be chapel and assembly hall with seating capacity of three hundred and fifty people and stage capacity of an additional sixty. The stage will be equipped for all concerts and plays which meet Academy needs. In the rear of the Assembly Hall will be cloak rooms with open fireplaces and large colonial settees.

The large sun parlor for promenade, with its wide portion, is in the center of the grouped buildings. The driveway and public entrances to the building will approach from Southeast Boulevard. At the termination of the winding drive are three entrances, known respectively as "Carrie Shaffner, Mary Patterson, and Emma Bahnsen" entrances. From the hallways two large colonial parlors, furnished in fitting style, open.

It is planned to have beautiful flowers gardens and shrubbery surrounding the buildings and completing their artistic effect.

classrooms and offices. The assembly room will be in the basement, the dormitories will be in the end wings, and the dining room in the basement of one wing.

Immediately after chapel regular classwork began with a smoothness which seems to be impossible. Efficient plans for enrollment and its preliminaries had been worked out during the summer and the regular schedule was begun without delay.

on the porch of Main Hall by the officers of the Junior class, Elizabeth Allen, Frances Fletcher, Annie Koonce Sutton, and Alice McCracken Caldwell. Tea was served by Margaret Richardson, Ernestine Thies, Anna Holderness and Eva Hackney.

A Break Away

A sort of spontaneous glee club seemed to have formed in Room 17 last Friday morning. A group of very dignified young ladies (don't they look it on the stage?) had assembled and were waiting, musically, for their professor to arrive. "Am I Blue," they chorused, and the tragic notes seemed to suggest that they were fairly purple. They sang feelingly of "Louise," probably a summer friend, and of "Pete," an appealing, sweet kid who plays the piccolo. Wide-eyed freshmen stared through the door in amazement, and catching something about "Lonely Nights," applied little white squares to their eyes reminiscently and fed to think that those girls who sang standing (or wabbling) at the portal on Thursday should be reduced on Friday to the frivolous, nonsensical rhymes about piccolo tweets and birds' twitters! It's their oppressive dignity rubbing them down. Anyway that's "their sin." They were prophesying glorious futures that had more to do with Spanish, practical bungalows than with round, ribboned parchment which ought to be the end of their dreams. Unless they get a little more serious, it won't be long before the strains of "I've Gotta Feeling I'm Failing," will be floating around the corridors and the Freshmen, no longer wide-eyed, will look up perky and answer, "Maybe, Who Knows?"

THE HERNDONS.

HEAR YE!
"Why do so many women rest their chins on their hands when thinking," pronounced the staidous Buck.
"That's easy," replied his friend. "It's to keep their mouths shut so they won't disturb themselves."

The father touring Europe on his leave of absence, did not forget the ones he left behind. His son received a card from Sparta saying: "This is the cliff from which the Spartans used to throw their defective children. Wish you were here. Dad."

Dear Sirs:
This is an open letter to every student in Salem College and Academy. We have missed you lots this summer and are more than glad to welcome you back again.
We want to remind you that at Wellfare's you are always welcome. We have in stock everything to be found in a first class drug store. Should we not have what you want we will be pleased to get it for you.
Let us take the place of your favorite drug store back home. We will give you the same courteous treatment that they gave you in your own home community. Our drinks and sandwiches are the best that money can buy and served in just the way you like them.
We also have a twenty-four-hour service on Kodak film developing; so leave your films with us.
Very sincerely,
WELFARE'S DRUG STORE.

Telegrams From Alumnae

No one but a Salem alumna can know how I long to be "standing at the portal" with you this morning.

To the seniors, congratulations; to the juniors, and little sisters, much love; to the sophomores—well, you are so important you don't need anything but I send greetings; to the freshmen, best wishes for four happy, happy years; and to Salem, my depest devotion.
MARGARET VAUGHN, '29.

Charlotte, N. C.
Best wishes for your whole New Year. Love to all.
SARA BELL,
Class of '27 and '28.

Johnson City, Tennessee
In spirit I am standing with you at the portal. How I should love to be there in person. May this year be a happy and successful one.
MARY LEE TAYLOR.

Johnson City, Tennessee
We always think of you at this time and wish we were with you. May this year be the best yet for both Academy and College with the love that is always in our hearts for Salem.
