The committee of Sigma Omicron Alpha, which is arranging the inter-class debates has been disappointed by the lack of class spirit shown in the tryouts. One Senior out of the ten asked thought it worth her while to spend the time and effort on preparing her paper. Where are the nine?

The preliminary inter-class debates have been scheduled for February 18. The final one will take place in Y. P. M., the first Wednesday in March. It is time that Salem students were showing in debating the class spirit which is proverbial on the athletic field. Come and root for your team!

The Red and Black, student newspaper of the University of Georgia, states that the Seniors will wear derbies and carry canes. The adoption of this old habit is an effort to restore some of the dignity of seniors.

Professor David Snedden of Teacher's College, Columbia University, believes that in the near future, college will have to divide themselves into three types, one for the "bread and butter" student, who comes to college to get a foundation for later business. One for the coon-skin coated youth who prefers a football game to the classroom, and one for the quiet seeker after learning.

At the recent meeting of the Virginia Legislature, the State's Teacher's College at Fredericksburg received $175,000. The present plans for the use of the money is to add another wing to the Virginia Hall dormitory, turn the entire Frances Willard Dormitory into rooms for the girls, and to provide a new dining room.

Students of the University of Michigan are permitted to have cars but they are forbidden to give rides to other students.

Dr. Elmer R. Hoke, who has been president of Catawba College, announced his decision to remain as president of the Institution, instead of accepting an offer extended him some weeks ago to become head of Racine College at Racine, Wisconsin.

According to the Davidsonian, important changes will be made in the awards of Rhodes Scholarships.
