Wake Forest—

In the seventh annual tagging ceremony fourteen outstanding men in the Wake Forest College student body were signally honored by being tapped into the Golden Bough, the Honor Society of the college. This organization includes students who according to the opinion of their fellow students and the members of the faculty, embody to the highest degree qualities of scholarship, Christian character, and efficient leadership, characteristic of Wake Forest men.

N. C. C. W.—

North Carolina college is now the largest woman's college in the south and the third in the United States according to the annual study made by Raymond Walters, dean of Swarthmore college.

The seven largest women's colleges in order are: Hunter, 4,014; Smith, 1,986; North Carolina College, 1,704; Florida State College for Women, 1,676; Wellesley, 1,500; Texas State College for Women, 1,282; Georgia State College for Women, 1,195.

Ohio Wesleyan University—

Delaware police were called upon recently to disperse a class fight between 400 Freshmen and Sophomore women on the campus of Ohio Wesleyan University. The Freshmen had refused to appear in a freshmen betis and the Sophomores wished to enforce the initiation rules. Hair pulling, scratching, biting and kicking were entered into by all. One was seriously hurt before the police could quiet the contestants.

New York University—

New York University co-eds were mamboing at a fashion show given at the University's Little Theatre in co-operation with a large department store of that city. The director of the costume designing division chose this method of teaching her students the facts concerning a proper and tasteful selection of attire.

Oxford University—

Oxford students are protesting vigorously against the invasion of their campus by women, saying that the august founders of the University never intended Oxford to be a place of lost hair pins and impossible hats.

Barnard College—

To combat chronic fatigue and to forestall malnutrition, colds and other ailments that accompany physical and nervous exhaustion, Barnard College, the women's department of Columbia University, New York, has inaugurated open-air classes in rest and relaxation.

These classes are prescribed to take the place of the three-period-week of physical activity, and substitute credits for the rest and relaxation classes are given to students who are not deemed physically fit to follow the regular courses in gymnastic work, dancing, or swimming that make up the physical educational requirements.

THE RANDOM SHOT

I shot an arrow into the air; it fell in the distance, I know not where, till a neighbor said it killed his calf, and I had to pay him six and a half. I bought some poison to slay some rats, and a neighbor swore it killed his cats; and rather than argue across the fence, I paid him four dollars and fifty cents. One night I sat sailing a toy balloon, and hoped it would soar till it reached the moon; but the candle fell on the farmer's straw, and he said I must settle or go to law. And that is the way with the random shot; it never hits the proper spot; and the joke you spring that you think so smart; may leave a wound in some fellow's heart.

"Going My way?"
"Ye."
"Kin I ride with you to my home?"
"How far away is your home?"
"Eight blocks."
"Yin parked farther than that."

THE ART OF BEING A GOOD MIXER DISCUSSED

1. You have been appointed to a position with a large firm. The best way to establish friendly relations with your business associates would be to:
—Avoid noticing and correcting the errors they make.
—Always speak well of them to the boss.
—Be interested and cooperative in your work.

—Ask to be allowed to do those tasks which you can do better than they can.

2. You are visiting your country relatives whose table manners are not so polished as yours. You should:
—Explain with tact the proper table manners.
—Send them a book of etiquette.
—Do as they do.
—Show as much refinement as you can without appearing conspicuous.

3. You are entertaining two friends, one of them radical and the other conservative in his views. If a heated discussion arises it would be best to:
—Take a definite stand with the one you think is right.
—Try to change the subject of conversation.
—Enter into the argument and give your point of view, showing where both are too extreme in their views.
—Ask them to change the subject so as to avoid further arguments.

4. A young man invites a young lady to go to a show with him. On approaching the theater he discovers he has left his pocketbook at home. It would be best to:
—Try to get tickets on credit by offering his watch as security.
—Try to find some friend from whom he can borrow money.
—Decide with her on a course of action.

—Find some plausible excuse and go home and get his money.
5. Suppose you are a junior clerk in a large office. The chief of your section enters your room while you are reading a newspaper when you should be working. The best way out of the situation would be to:
—Continue reading the newspaper and show no embarrassment.
—Fold it up and return to your duties.
—Appear that you are making news clippings relative to your work.

—Try to interest the boss by reading aloud an important headline.
6. Suppose you are president of a community center organized for improving community conditions. Meetings for the past three months have been poorly attended. The best way to bring more citizens to the next meeting would be:
—Visit prominent citizens and lay some of the problems before them.
—Advertise an interesting program for an evening meeting.
—Post notices of the meetings in all public places.
—Send a personal notice of the meeting for all members.

FORMER FACULTY MEMBER HEARD AT Y. P. M.

On their attention was directed to a heathen graveyard with its obvious, crude associations. Over each grave the natives had built a thatched hut in which was placed furniture, food bedding, and even clothing as supplies for the departed in his future life.

Mrs. Hamilton next turned her attention to the language of the natives. It differs from the languages of Europe and North America in that the vocabulary is short, and it is especially ill-suited as a means of Bible-teaching, because there are no abstract nouns. Love, for instance, is a compound word meaning literally "to pain the heart," hope, "standing at the end of the road and waiting for the things that are to come," and Mercy, an especially meaningful word, "God has a white heart."

A trip thirty-five miles along the beach on a half-starved horse was a hardship in itself, but to make matters worse, there was a fine, driving rain which aggravated the malaria fever with which Mrs. Hamilton was afflicted at the time, to a dangerous state. The missionary gave a realistic narrative which not only brought out the hardships of travel of this kind but showed its necessity as well, and the speaker unconsciously convinced her audience of her hardy spirit and genuine pluck by the simple way in which she told of the tortuous situation.

Her next picture of South American life was a skillful reproduction of the village in which she and her husband have lived and taught for some years. There is no store or trading house; everything is carried on at the mission church. In this unpretentious building Mr. Hamilton preaches and she herself teaches reading, writing, and a form of domestic science. Their activity does not stop at teaching and preaching, however; the two of them have attempted to teach the boys to play baseball and the girls to play basketball. Their efforts have finally been successful and most gratifying. "The two medicine days" which the Hamiltons schedule each week are the source of much benefit and actual relief to the people.

Mrs. Hamilton closed with a significant reference to the missionary challenge, "Go ye into all the world and preach the Gospel to every creature!"

HIGHLIGHTS AMONG THE FACULTY'S ACHIEVEMENTS

in a plane. It is hoped that the remainder of the Faculty also spent an enjoyable and profitable vacation, being human as well as intellectual, they probably are sharing with the student body the general problem of getting rid of "hang-overs."

TO WOMAN

(By a young gentleman of the 60's)

Thou dost thy smiles on all bestow
Who at the shrine of beauty bow!
Yet fairest tempter of the earth
Thou'rt fickle as the smiles of mirth
Though fleet as vision of the mind
And changeful as the summer wind
Thy vows are bound with silken bonds
And all thy thoughts are "tracked in sand."

Thy vows are made yet fade as soon
As the orb of the inconstant moon
Yet we are bound by heaven to love thee
If 'twere not vain we would adore thee
For who can resist the matchless

grace,
The beauty of thy form and face,
The tear drops in the darkling eye
Like star that gems the midnight sky
The necker lip that blushing glows
A shame that shames the reddest rose
The alabaster neck and brow—
But devil take the muses now
For who can paint a woman's tongue
A shame that it were made so long
It spoils my picture and my verse
For woman, 'tis thy greatest curse
But pardon me I do thee wrong
For pity only to thee does belong
When pain and sickness round us spread
And sorrow gathers o'er our head
Thou art as holy angel then
Sent to soothe and comfort men.
