

HYMNS AND SONGS BELOVED BY BISHOP EDWARD RONDTHALER

Art thou weary?

Jesus makes my heart rejoice
Peace, perfect peace
Break thou the bread of life
More holiness give me
Rise my soul and stretch thy wings
The Saviour's blood and righteousness

Awake my soul and with the sun
Ten thousand times ten thousand
Go to dark Gethsemane
Jesus who with Thee can compare be?

Teach me my God and King
Sing hallelujah praise the Lord
Sun of my soul
Now let us praise the Lord
Abide with me
Saviour like a shepherd lead us
Lord for Thy coming us prepare
Be present with thy servants, Lord
Lord thy body ne'er forsake
Bless the Lord our congregation
We in one covenant are joined Hail all hail victorious Lord and Saviour
With thy presence, Lord
Jesus Saviour pilot me
Mary to her Saviour's tomb.

Proper appraisal of the venerable Bishop Rondthaler, dean of the Moravian Church of North Carolina, would list him well among the first citizens of North Carolina, first in consecration to a noble work, first in his thorough dedication to the Christian ministry, first in extensiveness of work well done for the Kingdom of God and first in that subtle influence for good that proceeds from such a man as this in a sort of endless and immeasurable stream.

Bishop Rondthaler's ministry for his own church represents an epic in constructive service. Memorable his long life as a servant of the Most High in the ranks of a church that is better known for its consecrated loyalty than for its conspicuousity and Bishop Rondthaler in his personal life, was typical of this ideal. He was not a man eternally seeking to be seen and heard; on the other hand, it suited him much better to do his labors quietly and without acclaim, to perform his ministry without the blatings of brass bands and to live his life out in humble service for Him whom he chose to represent.

Verily, a great man has fallen.

PILLARS OF FAITH

As they buried the venerable Bishop Rondthaler there must have been some among the mourning thousands who pondered the contribution that he and his kind have made to the betterment of mankind. What an influence they have wielded in parts of the world—on the continent, in England, in America and perhaps elsewhere. Limited numbers in limited spheres, the Moravians and those similar groups of religionists from Central Europe have been a power for good in the world. Principally in Pennsylvania and North Carolina in this country, they have established their simple but superb faith and their quaint but wholesome customs so firmly that centuries have not erased one or the other. Indeed, their faith can never die, as the venerable bishop told his people in old Salem time and again, while their customs are only beginning slowly to yield to newer ways in spots here and there.

Those first American Moravians who crossed the sea and located in, then remote regions, seemingly seeking solitude, as if shunning contamination, were examples of devotion, courage and industry to those who settled around them. They brought high ideals with them, for Central Europe had long lived by higher ideals than the rest of the world. Those ideals have been perpetuated, to the benefit of millions.
