

On Sunday night, May 3, one of the most impressive services at Salem will be held. The installation of the new Y. W. C. A. Cabinet will be held in the library at six o'clock with both the old and new Cabinet taking part. Everyone is urged to come to this service, for we are sure your own joy will enjoy it.

The "Y" store has good, and a great variety of food to please everyone's taste. Be sure when that hungry feeling comes to go visit the store to see if you can find something to ease the pain.

A FAMILY TRAGEDY

fed in the feather beds which were pushed up against the lolly decorative wall paper, because they made such an excellent place to hide—the first time. One could sink down, down, deep into the feathers and stretch the cover taught over one, and be perfectly safe from discovery. Doubtlessly, Mama had a trying time getting them to bed, for they were having a heavenly time playing about in their long bulky night clothes, the girls with braided hair down their backs and the boys with bangs in their eyes. It was with much fidgeting and squirming they stood in line in front of the wash stand while rather faded, Mama washed grimy face after face.

Very early next morning, Papa, who was a slight man with a mouse-tache much too large for the rest of him, with all his heavily laden family trailing behind him, resumed his journey. Not until the slow train had been on its way for over half an hour did they miss Mildred, but when they did they were nearly frantic. Mama and all of the children began to weep hysterically, that is, all except the boys who revelled in the thrillingness of the adventure, for they were sure that she had been kidnapped by a fiercely bristling villain, with very greasy black hair and a long curled mustache. Papa rushed up to the conductor and shouted at him to turn the train around and go back. But, of course, Papa had to jump off at the next junction and, hiring a horse, rode post haste back to Charlotte.

At the Empire Hotel none had seen Mildred. Papa went into a tantrum and threatened to ruin the hotel if they did not produce her immediately. The fat little manager in his shirt sleeves perspired freely and protested again and again, when he got any chance, that if they did not have her, how could they produce her, and what did he think the Empire was anyhow—a nursery? This made papa all the angrier, and he dashed off to look for the constable whom he dragged to the hotel.

And here the tragedy ends, for there was Mildred, weeping noisily

THE SEVEN CARDINAL REQUIREMENTS FOR AN "A" IN EDUCATION

1. Develop a fool proof bluffing technique.
2. Read, digest, analyze, and otherwise assimilate the New York Times—ostentatiously.
 - a. Take in gradually increasing doses reaching the maximum on Sunday.
 - b. Carefully repress any tendency to indulge in inferior journals unless your attitude is that of a critic.
 - c. Establish a family clipping bureau—remember the 3 by 5 files.
3. At auspicious moments, preferably if the prof. is within two yards, carelessly thumb through the hundreds and some odd education magazines which seem to come out daily.
4. If there is only one available class reference—make sure it disappears, and you have the only perfect alibi.

5. Prepare for objective and objectional measurements—i. e. tests—in the following manner:
 - a. Develop a tenacious memory for details—the rest doesn't matter. The less important the better.
 - Reference—Sears Roebuck Catalogue.
 - b. Use only your favorite arm-chair for study—and have only one light shining in your left eye.
 - c. N. B.—e. f.—point—bluffing technique.
6. Technique of being marked.
 - a. Blithely, and gracefully, fall into any and every normal curve that comes along, preferably in the upper 3%. N. B. Beware of skewed curves.
 - b. Remember, you, as an inmate of this institution, are super-intelligent. Stress this fact as often as appears necessary.

7. Classroom Procedure.
 - a. Assume a challenged expression when anything comes up in class.
 - b. Take part in any and every class discussion whether you know what it's about or not.
 - c. Volunteer madly for any report coming or going—preferably going.
 - d. Raise plenty of questions—accompanied by a painfully questioning countenance. Act as if your fate depended on the solution of at least half of the aforesaid questions—and as many more as your face can stand without cracking.
 - e. Be careful to make daily attempts to lead the professor astray from his carefully planned lesson. Your request for information must never be hampered by mere lesson plans.
 - f. Never waltz the clock open. I'll get there without your help.
 - g. Make constant references to "Chapman and Connt's," "Douglass" and others; these references must be glib—never apologetic.
 - h. If necessary, take the ball by the horns and throw it.

8. Penicillin.
 - a. dangle on the professor's expansive chest. Her dusty fingers were smeared on his stiff collar a fantastic design. During the night she had fallen through the crack between the feather bed and the wall, and, strange to tell, she had slept peacefully on until the noises made by the chambermaid awoke her. The rest you know except, probably, the glad faces of the family when she was delivered to their very musing embraces in a dingy wooden railroad station.

Intercollegiate News

Durham—Two distinguished guests were entertained at Duke by the Bar Association when John H. Wigmore, dean emeritus of Northwestern University, and Will Shafrath of Denver, Colorado, visited the campus.

World Events

NEW YORK—Governor Franklin D. Roosevelt refused to act against Mayor James J. Walker in a charge brought against the latter by the city affairs commission. The charges were not sufficient to justify disavowal of the Mayor.

Ex-senator J. Thomas Hefflin says "Al" Smith will run again in 1932 and will be defeated by a bigger manorly than in 1928. Speaking in an address at Planters Warehouse M. Hefflin waged his usual war against Catholicism and Raskob.

The American Museum of Natural History will explore the great cliffs and eastern edges of the vast plateau in Southern Venezuela. Here is the actual scene on which Coma Doyle based his fantastic story, "The Lost World." The plateau consists roughly of about 30,000 square miles, and has never yet been entered, so far as is known, for the cliffs have turned back several exploring parties.

RALEIGH—On April 30, the senate of North Carolina accepted the conference committee's measure for biennial revenue bill. The senate vote was 23 to 22 and house vote 61 to 31. The main change made by the conferees was to insert the Hindsale selected commodities or "merch" sales tax in the compromise measure.

LYMPNE AERODROME—Bad weather forced two British flyers, off on a projected round trip flight to Australia to turn back to the air field here. The aviators Shack and Chaplin, had passed Brussels when they decided to return. They had left at 5:15 A. M. for Australia expecting to make round trip in 21 days.
