

SOIETY

Friday evening the Seniors were the guests of honor at an annual dinner given by Mrs. Rondthaler in the library. The decorations, red and white flowers and blue candles, carried out a patriotic scheme. The place cards were red diplomas tied with white ribbons, red and white in addition being the class colors.

Each Senior met her dinner partner in the lobby of Main Hall, from where they proceeded to library. After each of the seven courses the guests changed partners and progressed to another table. With every course came favors including flags, "George Washington" and "Statue of Liberty" hats, canes and parasols, conversational puzzles, and a grab bag. Tiny individual cakes were served, four of which contained the much-covered ring and dime, and the less-wanted thimble and button. Red and white after dinner mints were served in gold baskets. After the coffee there were table fireworks.

Tommy Effe, Rosalie Smith, Mary B. Williams, and Margaret Schwartze furnished the music throughout the dinner.

TO MR. LEAP YEAR

didn't because I'm not the sort that would "horn in" on anybody else's property; I would rather suffer in silence like a lot of other heroic people are doing now.

It's not so much danger of me getting a look-in anyway; the girls around here will introduce you to their fathers, mothers, sisters, brothers, uncles, aunts, and grand parents but they don't care to show you any more of the boy friend than his picture.

This fact, however, only serves to convince me that I am attractive because they evidently don't want my competition. So I thought I'd just write to you, Mister Leap Year, and get you to help me out. I've tried Dorothy Dix but she's never been to Salem College and doesn't know anything about the terrible problems we girls here have to face. Now as I understand it, you have a special technique in which the girl does you nothing. There are so many techniques in use down here already that I get discouraged trying to think of something new, but since yours is used only one year out of every four I figure it ought to be more effective than most of these old lines that have been hung out every day of every year since long before the calendar was made.

I am depending on you to help me out in this matter. As for the type of fellow I want, I'm not at all particular and will take anything you have to offer provided he is very good looking, has blonde hair and deep blue eyes, talks nice, plays football, has a good looking roadster. Oh, yes, and I'd rather the hair would be curly if it's all the same to you.

I am ready and willing to do my part for I am desperate. I've stayed around here so long that I think even Miss Lawrence would like to help me get out, but I hated to bother her with this knowing how busy she is.

You needn't write an answer to this if you'll just send a fellow my way; I'll be expecting him and believe me I'll take him good care of him.

I'd like to meet him sort of accidentally in a very effective setting. How about sending him down to Gooch's—that would be so romantic!

Yours in hope,
—Pansy Ketchum.

SENIORS BOW TO FROSH
The Freshmen game team gained a 40-to-32 decision over the Seniors in a hard-fought game Wednesday night, February 24th. This game was the third of the interclass series.

The Seniors took the lead at the beginning of the game but were unable to hold it. At the end of the second quarter the Frosh were one point ahead, the score being 19-18.

The defensive play of both teams was one of the features of the game. The floor work of "Shorty" Biles, captain of the Senior team, was outstanding. Hollen's passes were unusually good, also.

Cokey Preston, Freshman, was the forward high scorer and was the most consistent offensive player for the Senior forwards in the scoring of goals with a score of 14.

The line-up and summary:
Freshmen—Pos. Seniors
C. Preston (23) (14) A. Preston R.F.

Dr. Rondthaler Talks To Davidson Students

Refuses to Reveal Facts of His Address

On Washington's Birthday Dr. Rondthaler addressed the students of Davidson College on the subject of George Washington's trip through the Southland. Being thoroughly familiar with the outline of that journey, he presented it to them in a vivid and interesting way. Needless to say, he included the time that Washington spent at Salem and described the valuable relics of that occasion which are treasured in the Moravian archives.

Whether or not Dr. Rondthaler really made George Washington make a detour by Davidson campus to admire the college, nobody knows. He smile like the pansy in his button hole and asserts that he did. Always, it appears, he would make people feel happy.

Wee Blue Inn Changes Hours of Business

New Salem Tea Room Proves Great Success

The managers of the Wee Blue Inn call attention to the recent change in hours. Though the tea room will still be open from four-thirty to five-thirty in the afternoon, the night hour is changed to nine-fifteen, remaining open until ten-fifteen. When a tea room does so much business that all cleaning of dishes must be done after closing hours, there must be time allowed for that before light bell.

Kitty Brown reports that the Wee Blue Inn is a great success financially. Already they have more than made expenses. Most of the spare nickels and dimes at Salem now go to Lehman Hall instead of the drug.

ship she placed loyalty. Sometimes people misunderstand the real meaning of loyalty and think it is simply standing up for one's friends when they are being criticized. Loyalty is so big that no friendship can exist long without it.

Loyalty makes us do things that we would not ordinarily do. Ruth put it before her desire for riches and went to live in a lonely hut; she put it before pride and went out to do a poorer's work. "She gave all—met the demands and tests of loyalty and in the future she found life and love and happiness."

"Teach us to know what loyalty demands—
Service and love, and willing hearts and hands.
Help us to face in life each trial and test."

HOME CHURCH CROWDED DURING WASHINGTON CELEBRATION

laide Fries, archivist of the Southern Province of the Moravian Church, the exact order of service, hymns, and the music were found. Miss Fries, the anthems which the choir sang.

To accompany the singing then and now there were five instruments. The musicians who played last Sunday were Miss Hazel Read, first violin and Miss Elizabeth McClougherty, second violin, both of whom were new to the orchestra. Mrs. Earle Sheum, head of the instrumental department of the Greensboro Public Schools, flute, Mr. Robert Ormsby, violin, and Mr. B. J. Pfohl, contra-bass violin. Mrs. J. Kenneth Pfohl conducted both the choir and the orchestra.

Never before has the Home Moravian Church been as crowded as it was. Chairs were placed in every available space and the aisles and vestibules were filled with people standing.

ACADEMY PUPILS VISIT HISTORIC SITES IN OLD SALEM

haunt of the "little red man," of Revolutionary War fame.

After the Brothers' House had been sufficiently inspected, the Sisters' House was visited. The beautiful architecture, the lovely white pine floors, and the charming hand-wrought lock and key were particularly pointed out. The girls read with great interest the old rules which students at Salem Academy then had to obey. The basement of the Sisters' House is similar to that of the Brothers' House.

The building which we next saw was the tavern where George Washington spent two nights in 1791. In the main room there is a spinnet piano remade into a desk. Upstairs is the room in which he slept.

The museum was reserved for another day. We are all looking forward to the time when we can go through that building with so interesting guide as Dr. Rondthaler.

Students To Give Evening Recital

Solos Representing Several Departments of Music

Those who are interested in music and particularly in the Salem School of Music, which has recently attained a high rating among colleges, look forward with pleasure to the first evening recital of the year. It will be held Monday evening at eight o'clock, in Memorial Hall.

Although a copy of the program could not be secured in advance, a list of the performers gives some idea as to the excellence of the program. Misses Evelyn Pratt, Nancy Harris, Rosalie Smith, Wanna Mary Huggins, and Irene Clay will play piano solos. The singers will be Mrs. J. Harold Swain, Miss Mary B. Williams, Mrs. B. A. Bowers, and Mr. Kenneth Bryant. Misses Helen Graeber and Elizabeth McClougherty will play the violin. The single organ solo will be played by Miss Dorothy Thompson.
