Mrs. Reid and Mrs. Haywood Presented In Chapel Program Delightful Story of "Enoch Arden" is Read and Played

Yesterday morning at Y. P. M. Mrs. E. Harrison Reid and Mrs. Roy Haywood brought a delightfully different program to Salem girls, faculty, and guests. Mrs. Reid read in a very expressive and exciting manner "Enoch Arden's" story. Mrs. Haywood accompanied her on a very fine musical which was written especially for this piece by Richard Strauss was particularly beautiful. There were three definite themes in the composition one for "Annie Lee, the little child," one for "Phillip Ray, the miller's only son" and one for "Enoch Arden, the rough sailor's lad". Enoch Arden is one of the most popular of Tennyson's works. There are over twenty-four translations including German, Dutch, French, Spanish, and Italian. The story of the three children, Annie Lee, Phillip, and Enoch growing up together on the shores of a small, snug, rocky island known to all of us. Annie Lee marries Enoch, who, going on a sea journey, doesn't return for years. Phillip, still loving Annie Lee, marries but Annie Lee still loves Enoch, but he is convinced of his death, because he does not return. The pitiful story of the return of Enoch, who is recognized, particularly well done by Mrs. Reid.

Halloween Party is Pleasant Surprise

Miss Stockton Gives Students a Grand Feast

At dinner on Halloween the dining hall was typically and appropriately decorated for the night. Each table had a huge pumpkin in the center of the table with smiling, waxy, and somber faces glaring from them in an almost human way. They cast shadows on the walls, and over the faces of those sitting around them, causing an atmosphere of Halloween spirit most noticeable in the shrill voices of the girls. It really sounded like a beehive or something and it really was something to have Dr. Hornblough there. His presence always helps, and you should have heard the girls sing "Stand up" in their dead-dead-dead way afterward, do you know what he said? "Stand up, you gueses, stand up, stand up, entered into the spirit of Halloween." I could hear him laughing even above the swarm of human bees.

Taking up the description of the dining hall again—Around the decorative "Jack-o-lanterns" were branches of spruce; a plate of stuffed red apples with a bit of whipped cream on top; halves of orange stuffed with yellow yams; tarts with cream chicken, and a dish of green peas with red pimentos in them to add color. To dessert there was pumpkin pie with whipped cream and pecans and cherries on top to decorate it. In the center of the room a paper streamer, entirely covered with strawbery and pees. Peering from the top of this clump of greenery was an even larger, lighted pumpkin than those on the various tables, and it seemed to laugh at everyone who passed by. Two candles burned on each of the eight serving tables in the room and furnished light for the whole room, and these the funny-faced lanterns were more or less ornaments which only cast a faint glow over the table on which they were placed.

The drapes at the long windows were orange and through the second windows on the right a full moon was shining over the top of a large weeping larch tree which stands in front of the 1002 1/2 Isa Hitting Building. These few beauties added to the inside of the room as well as the outside of the room as well as the inside of Halloween atmosphere.

Haywood Students Writes Student Honor System

North Carolina Student Expresses Opinion

The two principle forms of student government are the honor system and the proctor system. The former is a principle that replaces espionage and monitoring by confidence in student honor on the theory that students are gentlemen and will act accordingly in an honorable manner. The latter is a system which denies that students are gentlemen and honorable and substitutes for a system of mutual confidence, one of policing. In an early American college, student discipline was a serious problem. The students were not trusted, and every act of theirs was closely spied upon and supervised. This naturally led to mutual distrust and much strife between students and faculty. We find, however, one of our first and greatest educators, Thomas Jefferson, promoting a new ideal of academic discipline in the following excerpt of a report of the commission appointed by the Legislature of Virginia "to fix the site and devise the plan of organization of the University of Virginia":

"The best mode of government for youth in large collections is certainly honor, promoting a new ideal of academic discipline in the following excerpt of a report of the commission appointed by the Legislature of Virginia "to fix the site and devise the plan of organization of the University of Virginia":

It may be well questioned whether fear after a certain age is a motive to which we should resort on any course. The human character is susceptible of other incentives to correct conduct, and of better effect. Pride of character, laudable ambition, and a moral disposition are limits and checks upon the indiscretions of the lively age, and when strengthened by habitual application of exercise have a larger effect on future character than the degrading impetus of fear. Hardening them to disgrace, to corporal punishment and severe humiliations cannot be the best process for producing good character. The affectionate dependence between father and son is in fact the best example for that of tutor and pupil; and the experience and practice of other countries in this respect may be worthy of inquiry and consideration with no other view than for the wisdom and discretion of the visitors to devise and perfect a proper system of government, which if founded in reason and congenial with the nature of the mind, will be likely to flourish in the minds of our youth, the combined spirit of order and self-respect, so essential to all political institutions, and so important to be woven into the American character.

The honor system is a thing to be loved and not defined. When one is asked to give it a definition, when one becomes accustomed to acting honorably at all times from a guiding within is more consistent with the true character than living under a proctor system, where one becomes accustomed to acting honorably because of external pressure. The opponents of the honor system attack the virtues of the system, where it gives the student too much opportunity to be dishonest. But in actual practice it does not work out that way. Even with those of weaker character the unrespected power of mutual confidence and fear of offending will hit first is stronger than the fear of being detected by a spying proctor. School-boy ethics is a curious branch

PIERRETTE PLAYERS SELECT FIRST PRODUCTION

The Pierrette Players have decided to present as their first play of the year "Mrs. Goring's Necklace" which is a delightful character comedy by J. H. Davies. An innovation is started in the fact that the production will take the male roles in the production. Try-outs will be held Tuesday night, November 7 at 8:00 o'clock.

Press Convention Held at Greenville

Salem to Be Represented at Fall Meeting

The North Carolina Collegiate Press Association will hold its fall convention at E. C. T. C. in Greenville, S. C., beginning today and lasting through Saturday. Tonight there will be a banquet. Tomorrow there will be morning and afternoon business sessions and tomorrow night a dance. The final business session will be Saturday morning. This is the Association which held a spring convention at Salem last year. It is an association of college boys and girls who are interested in newspaper and annual work. Salem will be represented this evening by Susan Calder and Isabel Pollock. Officers of the association are Eugene Newson, President, Duke University; Sam Cude, First Vice-President, Salem College; Hoke Norris, Treasurer, Wake Forest College; Frances Mallard, Secretary, Flora-McDonald College.

VERTICAL FILE IS INTRODUCED IN LIBRARY

Behind the Loan Desk in the library is a filing cabinet. This is the Vertical File (also known as Pamphlet File, Information File, or Reference File). It contains valuable up-to-date information by pamphlets, all arranged alphabetically by subject. Those who are interested to which we should resort on any course. Governor Proclaims Education Week

North Carolina Makes Constructive Plans

November 6-12 is American Education Week. J. Henry Highsmith, Director, Divisional Instruction, Office of N. C. is making great plans for work in the North Carolina Public Schools. Chapel programs, committees, numerous speakers, bulletins, boards, and newspaper announcements are all being planned. The following radio programs have been planned: Raleigh—WPTF November 6-11 at 8:00 P. M. and November 12, 1933 at 8:00 P. M. Greensboro—WBIG November 6-10 at 6:00 P. M. Charlotte—WBT November 6-11 at 9:00 A. M. and Nov. 12 at 9:00 P. M. Asheville—WUNC (To be arranged).

PROCLAMATION AMERICAN EDUCATION WEEK

NOVEMBER 6-12, 1933
State of North Carolina Capital
"Understanding that under the sponsorship of the United States Office of Education, the American Legion and the National Education Association, a week, known as American Education Week, is to be set aside each year to stress the importance of our public school work and the universal consideration of public school education; and desiring that the citizens of North Carolina generally may be informed of the problems of public education and the great tasks of training our youth for the duties of citizenship;

And recognizing the desirability of cooperating with other States in this undertaking and providing an opportunity for a full, fair and free discussion of the situation and the various issues involved;

Now, THEREFORE, I, John C. B. Ehringhaus, Governor of North Carolina, do hereby proclaim and designate, from November 6 to November 12, as American Education Week, and since the same is to be generally observed throughout the United States, I hereby request that all citizens of the Commonwealth of North Carolina, observe the same with the same order that we may make proper appraisal of our situation and prepare ourselves for the proper discharge of the responsibilities involved."

GOOD SCHOOLS IN BAD TIMES

"When trouble comes we turn to fundamentals. Home becomes dear. Neighbors and friends mean more. We understand better the mission of the church. Let us appreciate the mission of the school. If schools are a blessing in good times, they are an imperative necessity in bad times. They safeguard the health of the child; they fortify the home; they give love and encouragement to citizens who are the victims of misfortune but who can take satisfaction that their children are being cared for. The schools are working together in the education better—to take more seriously our common task of preparing the young for life.

Times which suggest retrenchment call for increased safeguards for schools. Next to food, clothing, and shelter, they stand between us and the future. Let us preserve and improve our schools. Let us keep the children first.

TAXES are the price we pay as citizens for such services as schools, playgrounds, parks, streets, polices, etc. Whenever we cut taxes we must reduce some of those services to ourselves. Our public services—in proportion to their basic importance—are probably the least expensive services we buy.

Press Convention

Salem Represented At Methodist Meet

Delegates Conduct Opening Worship Service

On Saturday, October 21, a delegation from Salem attended the opening session of the North Carolina Methodist Students' Conference, held in Greensboro, October 21 and 22, and conducted a worship service as part of the afternoon's program. In keeping with the theme chosen for the entire conference, Loyalty of the Christian, the worship service had as its theme, Loyalty, a Mark of a Christian. Margaret Schwartz opened the service by playing a violin solo, "Prayer." Libby Jerome, who presided, read a selection from Tolstoy, and then made a brief talk on Loyalty, stressing the points that Loyalty always meant faith in the leader, the cause, and oneself; unselfishness, and finally emphasizing that Loyalty in the Christian cause meant an active, not passive, belief. She closed her talk with a poem, Rebecca Hines, accompanied by Margaret Schwartz, sang "Jesus, the Very Thought of Thee," and the service was brought to an end by a prayer offered by Dr. Raymond Smith of Centenary Church.

Immediately following the worship service, a conference on "The worship conference on 'Loyalty to Christ,' and then the group broke up into discussion tables of well-known and well-chose leaders.

In addition to the girls taking part in the program already mentioned, Salem was represented by Sunny Kirby, who accompanied Margaret Schwartz to the conference, and who planned the program. Dr. Raymond Smith drove the girls to the meeting.

Cuba People Fear Fall of Government

Strikes, Terrorism, and Conspiracy Menace Cuba

The government which has been set up in Cuba by Ramon Martin is being threatened by strikes and conspiracy. Bus and railroad strikes and also strikes in fuel companies have made transportation difficult. There is also alarm over the fact that the lights in Havana are being continued. This would increase street riots.

Officers, including a mayor, a captain, and a lieutenant are now under arrest, charged with conspiracy. The Cuban government has been threatened by serious strikes in sugar mills. In Havana, Captain Franc, chief of police, planned to make surprise raids on buildings where arms and ammunitions are hidden by government forces. He was also planning arrests among the Communists. These disorders, together with the fear of bombs, are making the Cuban situation "unpleasant." As a result, it is justly to be expected, as unstable as it is, is government.
