

SWIMMERS SHOW GOOD PROGRESS

Beginners and Advanced Classes Have Meet

The swimming meet presented this afternoon by the beginners and advanced classes, showed a great improvement made by the swimmers this spring. Especial notice should be given to those girls who could not swim at all before the swimming season opened three months ago and who were able today to show both the side stroke and the back stroke in good form and in deep water. The winners were Janet Stimpson, Ruth Kykendall, Elizabeth Smith, Martha Schlegel, and Anna Wood Shumate.

Girls entering the events from the advanced classes were:

Strokes for form—

Keys have been ordered. They will be made of ten carat gold. On front of each the name of each particular publication and the Wake Forest will appear. On the back of each will be the name of the editor, business manager and the office he held.

Those who will receive keys this year are: Ed Schulte, editor of the Old Gold and Black; Jerry Hamer, business manager of the Old Gold and Black; Thompson Greenwood, editor of the Student; Ellis Meares, business manager of the Student; Charlie Harris, editor of the Hooper; and L. P. VanLandingham, business manager of the Hooper.

Items and Odds

It was originally intended to call this column My Point of View, but we insisted that it should be Gossiping. I decided to use neither.

—A man who marries and swindles several women out of their money is a scoundrel and is clapped in jail.

—A woman who marries several wealthy gentlemen and later gets alimony, or who wins several breath of promise suits, is said to have won a sex victory and gets a vaudeville contract.

Snores are sound sleepers.

It used to be that when a girl didn't dance she was a wallflower, but now a girl who always dances is considered the wallflower.

A gentleman of leisure is a lady who, when she is bored, has no money to live without having to work.

Examination Time

For the past week or two the casual observer might easily have noticed a decided change in the general atmosphere around school. Flippancy and indifference have given away to feverish apprehension. Stopped shoulders have become a generalized affliction.

The long-pending room reading has attained an unusual degree of popularity with the student body at large. Notebooks are renewing old acquaintances, and once again textbooks are beginning to see the light of day. —Skull and Bones.

DUKE

Professor McDougall, of the Department of Psychology, who gave a lecture to the Salem girls on their tour to Duke, Carolinian, in January, is now in England with his family. He is working on a book, the subject of which has not yet been divulged. It will be published in the fall.

and they were counting out the money. They made a fortune and a reputation in one fell swoop.

Again the grasshopper lands and again he bursts into song. This time he dances too, and recites a lovely poem, and plays Stormy Weather on the piano in the Hat. Everyone who saw the minstrel presented by the Negro Help on the campus and sponsored by the Senior Class, was doing the same things the grasshopper is doing the next day, or at least trying to. The minstrel was one of the most genuinely interesting programs ever presented at Salem. We have hopes of repeating it next year.

Are there any more class activities which have been hoped or skipped over by the green calendar-coverer? Mercy yes. Let him stop for three and a half beautiful, softly lighted, hours at the Hershell Club for the Junior-Senior Party. He wishes to shake the hands of Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Salmon, Mr. and Mrs. T. Holt Haywood, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Shore and Mr. and Mrs. James Gray before the party. They were all so gracious hosts and hostesses of the very delightful party.

At the student class parties that were exceptionally successful, the grasshopper touches with his light feet the Freshman banquet and dance given in honor of their big sisters, the Juniors, the Sophomore banquets and parties, the Junior-Senior Party.

The Seniors have been so party-minded that they have not been on the annual events which always are left on the shoulders of their class. The burning was unique with its Indian motif, and Ivy Day presented in a novel way with its original toasts and original toasts.

Christmas was so long ago that the grasshopper was about to forget it. He has a lot of stops back in that territory. The Senior Vesper service, with its bewitching candles, the Senior Party with its gifts for all the seniors, the Academy Pageant with its Irish ballads and Leonardo da Vinci's living picture.

The Pierettes did their share of the year's entertaining when they presented "Mrs. Goring's Necklace," and had a full house.

In the world of fashion, the I. R. S. has been quite interested. The big fashion show for five big stores in Winston was preceded by an I. R. S. banquet in honor of the Academy seniors. Then there was another fashion show, exclusive to Senick's which was sponsored by an organization on the campus. And probably the grasshopper will have to go back to May 5 again, in the interests of the I. R. S. because that was the date of their May Day Hoosery.

The Student Government Camping trip at Camp Hanes last fall was the first event of importance in the school year. A huge project this spring in the student government line was the opening of Lamm Hall to the N. C. F. S. Convention held at Salem. Some of the boys became so engrossed (CONTINUED ON PAGE FOUR) and asked them to send more and to ask other people to send worn garments. Her business increased by leaps and bounds and through it she has been able to build a beautiful school at Crossnore and to help boys and girls in the mountains to go to college.

Dr. Sloop related many amusing and yet pathetic stories of the life of these mountaineers among whom she works. She gave to us an appreciation of their sincerity, courage, and dignity of heart which may be gained through close association with them. In spite of their enormous families the men never refuse to admit into their poor homes any children who have no place to stay. Mrs. Sloop told the story of the man who had fourteen sons and two daughters and who adopted fourteen more sons. The simplicity of the style of living in this family makes us wonder how they existed.

The people of the western North Carolina mountain section are of Old English ancestry and are truly Americans. They are very fond of music and at night they come together to sing pretty ballads of love and adventure. One of these boys who loved music went to the University of North Carolina to school and is now a radio broadcaster in Chicago. There are nearly four hundred pupils in the school now and of that number, seven out of nineteen of the graduates go to college. When we stop to think about it, that is an amazingly high percentage.

Mrs. Sloop used to want the boys and girls to come back to the mountains to live after graduating from college, but she feels now that they should find their place in the world and help us to learn the first lessons of economics and hard work. They have plenty of boys and girls left behind to live after graduating from college, but she feels now that they should find their place in the world and help us to learn the first lessons of economics and hard work.

The informality of Dr. Sloop's talk and the charming way that she presented it, made it highly enjoyed by everyone. Girls who had never thought of such a thing before were moved to exclaim: "I should like to do work of that nature."

A GLIMPSE AT THE EXCHANGE

ROCHESTER, N. Y.

Dear Editor:

Must we have quizzes after the first of May? This all goes back to the exceedingly stale and dry question of student load. But how a person going to keep up with her daily work, write an unlimited number of term papers, and take a thousand and one little quizzes. After all it's a physical impossibility. Of course you say, term papers were assigned three months ago, and there was a perfectly good Easter vacation during which you had nothing to do. But at the beginning of the year there was no more time to work on papers than there is time to prepare for quizzes now. You simply can't sit all there at once, unless you are a genius or a Brundage.
