ALUMNAE NEWS

Lillian Watkins, class of '24 has visited her sister, Ethel, several times this year.

Jane Williams stopped here for a short visit on her way to Waynesville where she was a bridesmaid in Martha Neal's wedding.

Frances Hill Norris and Rachel Carroll stopped here on their way to attend Martha Neal's wedding. Frances Hill is spending the winter in Orlando, Florida and Rachel is at the University of N. C. working on her M. A. in history.

Mary Audrey Stough Ambrough, class of '28 stopped here with her young son to make a short visit. They are from Chicago and are relatives in North Carolina.

Anna and Pat Holderness were here long enough to "look in," but they said they were coming back soon.

Susan Calder, Alice Stough, and Marian Hadley, class of '34, stopped to say "hello" — Susan is teaching English in Gastonia. Alice is taking a business course at Queens College, and "Hadley" has a secretarial position.

Miss Tommy Frye, of Pilot Mountain, a graduate of Salem College, will marry Oscar Wilbur Kochtitzky, Jr., of Mt. Airy, October 26, 1935.

MARTHA NEAL AND JAMES TROTTER ARE MARRIED IN WAYNESVILLE

The marriage of Martha Neal and James F. Trotter took place on Saturday evening, at 8 o'clock, October 19, in the First Presbyterian Church at Waynesville.

The altar of the church was banked with tall hemlocks, in front of which were arranged floor chandelabra with numerous lighted tapers, and on either side were seven floor vases of large white chrysanthemums.

Miss Jewel Hipps and Miss Jane Williams were lovely bridesmaids in their velvet gowns of rich mandarin orange, fashioned with draped effect in back that ended in train.

Miss Adelaide Trotter, second maid of honor wore jade blue velvet and carried yellow chrysanthemums. Miss Mary Adams Ward, first maid of honor, wore a gown of marigold velvet. The small ring-bearer, Master Wilson Trotter carried the ring on a white satin pillow.

The bride was given in marriage by her brother, James B. Neal and was met at the altar by the bridegroom and his best man, his father, Henry Lee Trotter. Her gown was of heavy, ivory satin, fashioned with cowl neck line, and long graceful train. The veil was of imported lace over tulle. Her flowers were white roses and lilies of the valley, tied with lacy ribbon.

Mrs. Trotter was graduated from Salem College in '35. She has been accorded many courtesies since the announcement of her engagement.

The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Lee Trotter of Winston-Salem.

GOSSIP

Boy! what gorgeous gardenias Martha O'Keefe has been sporting for the past week! Ain't love expensive?

Listen! It's rumored that a Senior majoring in English reads "True Story" in her spare moments. Some taste — I'll say.

Squeaks issue from the rooms on third these days. Sometimes they're from real animals but most of the time from animals (stuffed) in Emily Richardsons' room.

Our photographer's camera broke last week, but don't you mind Aggie — you couldn't help it. Here's somethin' else on the photographer, he thinks Betty Gaither is some "flapper." Ask Betty why, and don't let her fool you — it was because she rolled those eyes at him. Oh! Oh!

I. R. S. COLUMN

You have a standing invitation to come to the Saturday night I. R. S. parties. Every week-end night some sort of entertainment has been planned — perhaps it will be a peanut party, perhaps it will be a musical party, but no matter what, you'll enjoy several hours of good clean, wholesome fun.

There are several reasons for your being particularly pleased with the parties. They should be wonderful excuses for that boy who keeps pestering you for dates on Saturday nights. Descriptions of parties are very good material for letters. A few hours of diversion will take your mind off that dreaded six-weeks test. The refreshments will appeal to the girls with the good, healthy appetites.

There are many reasons for your coming and innumerable reasons for your having a good time. We'll expect you Saturday night.

MISS FILLUP SPACE PRESENTS TALK OF THE TOWN

Twas at 6:30 the other morning that two little Biology hunters were on a prow. They were hunting for ferns down back of the practice house, and imagine their surprise when they saw a light in the kitchen! (They really thought they were the only ones up). Soon they recognized Misses Marx, Reece, and Schlegel — getting breakfast — and trying to keep their eyes open at the same time. It must have been an edifying sight!

And have you heard? Gardenias and more Gardenias—and still more! All on account of she met him and he met her! Can you believe it? Well, watch for those gardenias (if you know what they look like, I had never seen one before!) — and you'll know who we mean. And still they come!

Ask M. M. if he's out of the hospital yet. Even if she won't say yes or no, just watch her. Anyway, it was nice going out there — wasn't it, M. M.?

Funny, but Jinny can't decide what to write down in the corner of that ever-so-nice picture of herself. Have you any suggestions? She can use a lot of 'em, so please tell her if you think up a single thing.

Everyone's so excited 'cause Mavis caught the bride's bouquet at Nanny's wedding. We can't wait to see who it'll be. She's next, you know.

Speaking of weddings — Salem girls are so generous and unselfish — always. Jose took one Saturday for hers, and left the next one open to Martha Neal. We hear she's using it — and we're glad!

What's all this about Jean Knox using Brilliantine on her hair? Has she a new "beaux"? No, she simply wanted to look pretty for her annual picture. (And she isn't the only one who is trying to do that, either.) It's sad though that she had to shampoo her hair before she could have her picture made.

Queer, but this space seems to have filled up altogether too quickly. It's a shame, too — because — but we won't go into that till next week.

DR. ANSCOMBE SPEAKS AT Y. P. M. ON THE HISTORY OF BIBLE

most ancient, is carefully guarded in the Vatican library at Rome; the other two are in the possession of the English and may be seen in the British Museum in London.

In the fourth century the Catholic authorities realized that there was no manuscript of the Bible in Latin which was authoritative. As a result, Brother Jerome was sent to Palestine to translate the scriptures into Latin. This man labored long and carefully for thirteen years and gave to the Catholic Church the Vulgate version of the Scriptures which was the Bible in Europe for a thousand years.

There are three thousand manuscripts of the New Testament in Greek dating from the fourth century to the fifteenth. In the fourth century there must have been fifty thousand in use.

Among the early English versions of the Bible, there are the Caedmon, 600 A. D.; Edhelm, 700 A. D.; Bede, 735 A. D.; Alfred, 871-901; and in 1378 came Wyclif, "the morning star of the reformation." Wyclif was the man who gave us the Bible first in English. Dr. Anscombe pointed out that both Wyclif and his successor, Tyndale, were terribly persecuted. Wyclif's body was exhumed, buried, and the ashes thrown into the River Swift. Tyndale was betrayed, imprisoned, strangled and his body burnt to ashes. Tyndale had the advantage of the others because he knew Hebrew, Greek, Latin, Italian, Spanish, English, and French. It is to Tyndale that we owe the beautiful diction which we have in our Bible. It was through his efforts that the first complete English Bible was printed in 1535.

Since that date there have appeared many versions, most of them following Tyndale closely. In 1551 the Bible was divided into verses by Stephen, a French printer, who worked on the versification of the Bible at night in hotels.

In 1611 the King James version was completed by fifty-four translators who had worked two years and nine months. They decided to have no marginal notes except cross references. This version was based largely on Tyndale. Although it was done for King James, it was never formally authorized. In this Bible we have the first uniform spelling book; it became the pattern of good English.

In 1870 Bishop Wilberforce in the House of Lords suggested a revision of the Scriptures and in 1880 the revised New Testament and in 1885 the Old Testament were issued. The English felt that they should co-operate with the Americans and so the American revised version is the outcome of findings by both English and American committees, in order that an interpretation agreeable to both might be found.

Dr Anscombe closed his talk with the suggestion that the students ask to see the Vatican, Sinoic and Alexanderian manuscripts if they are ever in Rome or London, and that meanwhile they might well take advantage of the Bibles on display in the library.

MISS ATKINSON WINS COUNTRY CLUB GOLF CHAMPIONSHIP

Miss Minnie Atkinson, head of our Physical Education Department, won the Twin City Country Club championship by defeating Mrs. Richard G. Stockton in the finals 6 to 5 in an 18-hole match played last week.

Miss Atkinson, driving accurately and for great distance, played a very steady and strong game in turning back the fighting of her opponent. She covered the first nine in 47, a very fine score for women.

The match was much closer than the score would indicate, and Miss Atkinson was forced to show an excellent brand of golf to win the title.
