"THE STEPMOTHER" PRESENTED IN Y. P. M.

Etta Burt Warren Directs One-Act Play

The second in a series of one-act plays was presented Wednesday morning in Y. P. M. Etta Burt Warren, a member of the class in play production was the director of "The Stepmother," a sprightly comedy by Arnold Bennett. Members of the Freshman Dramatic Club were the actors.

Mary Turner Willis played the part of Mrs. Prout, a neurotic lady novelist. Mildred Minter was Miss Faversham, secretary to the writer. Emma Brown Grantham played Dr. Gardner, the ardent admirer of Mrs. Prout. Evelyn McCarty was Adrian Prout, the stepson of Mrs. Prout.

The action of the play revolves about the efforts of the secretary to effect a reconciliation between Mrs. Prout and her husband. Mrs. Prout is in love with a man who had been turned out of the house by Mrs. Prout when she had found him making love to Miss Faversham. The secretary also endeavors to straighten out the tangled love affair of her employer and Dr. Gardner. After some complications, caused by an anonymous attack made on the novelist in a magazine article, the play ends very happily.

DR. A. W. HARDING TALKS ON ASTRONOMY

Illustrated Lecture Made To Capacity Audience

Dr. Harding, professor at the University of Arkansas, a writer, an astronomer, and a lecturer, presented a most fascinating lecture on astronomy in Memorial Hall on Tuesday afternoon at five o'clock. The interest of the talk was increased through the use of pictures. The speaker showed on the screen a picture of the astronomer's perpetual calendar. He stated that the distance to the sun is 93,000,000 miles and that it takes 8 minutes for the light of the sun to reach the earth. For this reason we never see the sun where it is but where it was 8 minutes ago. There are nine planets and the nearer they are to the sun the faster they travel around it, the nearest taking only 88 days to complete a journey around the sun. Dr. Harding said that every star is a sun and our sun simply a small star. Our moon, Dr. Harding said, is only one of 26 large moons, and so is "the" moon is not correct. Dr. Harding concluded his lecture with pictures to illustrate the large number of stars in the sky.

The lecture was well received by a capacity audience and the student body is indeed grateful to the trustee who made it possible.

MOTHERS OF NON-RESIDENT STUDENTS HONORED AT TEA

South Hall was never lovelier than it was Wednesday afternoon when the mothers of the new off-campus students were honor guests at tea. The hall and the faculty parlor, where the freshmen and other new girls with their mothers were received, were resplendent with bright yellow gerberia and green ferns. The guests were received at the door by Stephanie Newman, head of the off-campus organization, and Virginia Garner. Receiving in the faculty parlor were Miss Katherine Riggan, dean of the non-resident students, and Mrs. Howard Rondthaler.

The mothers and student advisors of the girls were given the opportunity to meet the mothers and to chat with them while they were served Russian tea and sandwiches. Members of the off-campus house committee served tea from a daintily appointed tea table over which Miss Grace Lawrence graciously presided. Members of the faculty receiving in the little dining-room where the tea was served were Miss Blair, Miss Lilly, Dr. Smith, Miss Stockton, Miss Vaughn, Miss Barrow, and Mrs. Meinung.

GREENSBORO STUDENT VOLUNTEER GROUP VISITS SALEM

Take Charge of Vesper Services

A deputation of the Student Volunteer Group of Greensboro College for Women took charge of the program of the Y Vesper Service on Sunday evening, March 15. The deputation included Jo Marie Thompson, Anne Elizabeth Faw, Lil Kirk Huggins, Deppe Barker, Katherine Thompson, and Dorothy Clay.

Those who took part in the Vesper Service were Jo Marie Thompson, Katherine Thompson, Lil Kirk Huggins, and Anne Elizabeth Faw. Jo Marie Thompson presided and presented in turn Katherine Thompson, who reads the Scripture; Lil Kirk Huggins, who told two stories; and Anne Elizabeth Faw, who gave a short talk.

These thoughts she left with us— that Christ's greatest commandment — was to love one another — even as He loved us enough to suffer on the Cross, and to give up His life for us. We who call ourselves Christians often do not realize that although we don't preach sermons with our lips, yet our lives are sermons to those around us, often to those who would meet Christ in no other way than through us. If we really love Christ, we are going to be guided by Him in fulfilling His Mission for us — and we are going to try to live as He lived, and to spread His Kingdom here on earth.

ELEANOR WATKINS SPEAKER AT WORLD FELLOWSHIP MEETING

At the World Fellowship meeting on Thursday afternoon Eleanor Watkins reviewed the book "Made in U. S. A.," written by R. A. Goslin. There are two policies to be taken toward other countries as far as dependence for products is concerned. One of these is economic nationalism. The reasons in support of this idea are desire for independency, avoidance of uncertainty in foreign trade, decline of big foreign markets, lack of importance of foreign trade, protection of our standard of living, and preparation in case of war.

The internationalists advance the following reasons in support of their theory. Natural dependence of one country upon another, increasing of trade through wealth, raising of standard of living through trade, promotion of world peace through trade, and large proportion of goods exported.

"Industrial firms are once again sending scouts to the colleges, seeking prospective employees." Prof. Donald S. Parks, Toledo University personnel director, points to a ray of sunshine.

COLORED WORKERS COMMENDED FOR SERVICE

Have Given Years of Loyal and Efficient Service At Salem

One of the most impressive chapel services for the whole year was that of last Saturday morning when Dr. Rondthaler read an article which appeared in the Sentinel concerning the colored workers here at Salem.

The article, by A. A. Mayfield colored reporter for the Sentinel, told of the 'thrift, honesty, and teamwork' of these workers.

"Some of these men have been on their jobs from six to twenty-three years. And for service, they are making one of the finest records that can be recorded by any institution or industry. These trusted servants are proud of the college officials, of the college, and so proud of their record that they pledge to maintain it to the end."

Any one who was in chapel and saw the reaction of the faculty and students would know that the college is equally as proud for these workers.

Among those who have been at Salem the longest are: Charles Cheek, known as "Charlie," who has been here at Salem twenty-three years; Russell Crews eighteen years; Ernest Grant eighteen years; Odell Stafford, sixteen years; Robert Y. Robinson, fifteen years; Ollie Miller, fourteen years; Fred Burl, thirteen years; Sherman Page, fourteen years; Hampton Ingram, eight years; Harry Campbell, three years; Conrad Burnett, four years; Robert Moore, one year.

"LIFE OF ST. PATRICK" SUBJECT OF INTERESTING TALK

Dr. Rondthaler is Speaker Tuesday

Dr. Rondthaler spoke on St. Patrick's Day in chapel Tuesday. In Ireland, he said, the seventeenth day of March was a national holiday in memory of their Saint Patrick who lived in the latter part of the fourth century. St. Patrick was really a Scotchman who was captured by bandits when he was fifteen years old and carried as a slave into Ireland where he served for six years. He escaped to Northern France where he became interested in the Roman Catholic Church and he entered a monastery.

St. Patrick, who's real name was not Patrick, desired to return to the land of his captivity. He went back full of love and enthusiasm. Rugged exterior, rugged energy, bodily strength, great personality, and Christian courage were the Patron Saint's characteristics. He built many churches and everywhere in Ireland the name St. Patrick was saluted with reverence. There grew many traditions and tales from his memory.

He wrote two things that are known: the story of his confessions, a faithful narrative of his youth's heart grown into manhood, and a letter to a father prison in France written in Latin and noted for its sincerity and grammatical ruggedness.

St. Patrick commemorated is a person of great proportion and of great influence today.
