ROBIN HOOD'S DOUBLE

Have you heard or read anything about archery? If you have you know that there is the right way and the wrong way of archery. Howard Hill says: "To shoot bow and arrow correctly, hold bow loosely in left hand. With the three first fingers of right hand holding string at the first joints, place arrow so that it rests on string between first and second fingers. Standing at right angles to target, extend left arm straight but not rigid. Have right elbow and forearm on same level. With right arm draw the string back until ends of fingers on the string touch the chin near corner of the mouth. When the arrow is fully drawn use steel print as sight, aim and release string."

Howard Hill is a man with a great deal of archery experience. He replied when asked what experience he had in archery that he had shot a 1,400 lb. buffalo with a bow as well as bear, deer, moose, eagles and sharks, that he could kill fish in twelve feet of water with an arrow, and that hitting ducks on the wing seemed a small accomplishment to him.

It is this man who did the trick shooting and the killing of persons by arrows in the movie "Robin Hood." In many of the shots Hill's skill was tested. For an example: In a close up he had to shoot a steel mace from the hand of Basil Rathbone. This scene he did successfully and many others similar.

Hill says that he would do his very skillful archery over again, for there is no real danger as long as everybody tends to his knitting.

AT LUNCHEON

girls her theory of the origin of royalty — that because one family survived all perils and the line remained in existence for generation after generation, primitive man felt that the family had been specially marked by some higher power for some great destiny. They were in awe of the family and set them apart from the rest of the people. Thus, the respect for royal blood, for a family which has that spark, that has the will to keep its line in existence, has come down to us. We should not be overawed by royalty and should not consider them as exalted people. They are as human as we. Our laundress is as important as a king — she has joys and sorrows just as he. Still, she concluded, proving that for her, in spite of her theories, royalty has a romantic fascination, she can't help but feel a sudden excitement when, sitting in a Parisian restaurant, some one points out a waiter, penniless and dejected and whispers, "He is a Hapsburg." All of the books which she has written deal with royal families.

INTRODUCING TO YOU—

dell on Salem campus in the spring time, just after a rain."

We tried to garner some information from her about her plans for the future, but she wouldn't "commit herself." However, she did say that she was "very satisfied at Salem." Grace has a knack for making friends. She likes people of all kinds, (especially little old ladies). But she likes Salem students, too; so we urge you new girls to get acquainted with her as soon as possible!

FALL TENNIS SEASON CLOSES

Josephine Hutchison, tennis manager, and Sallie Emerson, assistant team manager, completed the upperclassmen doubles tournament by winning a decisive victory in a 6-2, 6-0 match from Sue Forrest and Catherine Harrell last Monday afternoon. The winners, in particular, showed excellent team work and skill throughout the game. This game completed the fall doubles tournament.

The fall tennis season will end this week-end when the freshmen will complete their singles tournament. The tennis manager thanks the freshmen for the interest and enthusiasm that has been shown throughout the tournament, and also predicts that Salem will see some excellent tennis if the freshmen continue as they have begun.

NOTES ON HORSEBACK

Riding, a favorite sport of the fall season, began last week. The riding class, composed of approximately twelve girls, rides on Tuesday and Thursday of each week. Miss At. accompanies the girls on the rides at Anderson's Riding Academy. One of the interesting features of the riding season is the opportunity given the girls to take moonlight and breakfast rides.

Emily Abbot, a freshman from Charleston, W. Va., says, "under Miss Atkinson's instruction, I believe that my riding will improve this fall. Our rides are a lot of fun and I'm particularly looking forward to the midnight and breakfast rides."

Another freshman, Jo Ann Brill, who has been riding for several years hopes to increase her knowledge under Miss At's expert guidance. "Although I have ridden for several years, there is still a great deal to learn, and I feel that I shall do that this year."

These two girls are typical of the girls who ride at Salem — optimistic, eager to work and to learn, willing to co-operate. A successful season will result, if the girls do not lose their enthusiastic interest.

TWINKLE, TWINKLE... AS RENDERED BY A BOSTON GIRL

Coruscate, coruscate, diminutive stellar orb! How inexplicable to me seems the stupendous problems of thy existence elevated to such an immeasurable distance in the illimitable depths of space, apparently in a perpendicular direction from the terraqueous planet we occupy resembling in the dazzling and unapproachable effulgence a crystallized carbon gem of unsurpassing brilliancy and impenetrability; glittering in those terebral valuts whose boundless immensity we endeavor to bring within the compass of the human intellectual group by the use of the concrete word firmament.

I had a little tea party
This afternoon at three.

'Twas very small,
Three guests in all,
Just I, Myself and Me.

Myself ate all the sandwiches
While I drank up the tea.

'Twas also I who ate the pie
And passed the cake to me.
