"I Like My Gal," Pianist Tells Reporters

by Martha Boatwright and Peggy Davis
Two people, "in love musically and non-musically," stirred a Winston-Salem audience Monday night not only with their pianistic skill, but also with their vivacious personalities.

Genia Nemenoff and Pierre Luboshutz were in their dressing room surrounded by ardent autograph addicts. On the table was a note. Taking it in her hand, Miss Nemenoff (Mrs. Luboshutz) said:

Are you the two interviewers? (After nodding our heads and knocking our knees, we took out our pens and paper.)

And what would you like to know? Millions of things? Let's make it just a few. I'll do the talking. Pierre thinks I speak better than he.

Ya-a-a-s, she do! Pierre leaned back in his chair. He is a pudgy little man with a long nose that is accentuated by a lock of straight

Mrs. Martin Gives Talk

Mrs. L. K. Martin of Winston-Salem talked on the problems and advantages facing the college women of today Thursday morning in assembly.

Mrs. Martin, a graduate of Randolph Macon College, was the president of the Junior Leagues of America during the war and is a well-known social and civic leader in Winston-Salem.

Since Thursday was Valentine's Day, Mrs. Martin kept the theme of love and friendship throughout her informal and informing speech.

"It is up to the college women of today," she challenged, "to begin thinking of their opportunities and advantages and make the decisions on what should be done with them." Each one must learn to use what she has and use it to the best advantage. If each will do her part, the results will be big and great things will be accomplished.

Each girl must keep an open mind, learn the facts on both sides of the problem; and decide on her own opinion. Above all she must not be afraid of change if it is a change for the best and a change for progress. She must keep two thoughts uppermost in her mind: think clearly and reason soundly.

Mrs. Martin says that the college girl must establish a universal love and friendship throughout the world if the chaos of the after effects of World War I is not to be repeated. We must cooperate with the rest of the world and really live and act (Continued on Back Page)

I. R. C. To Have Student Forum

At the request of the student body, the International Relations Club is planning to have student forums every other week beginning the first week in March.

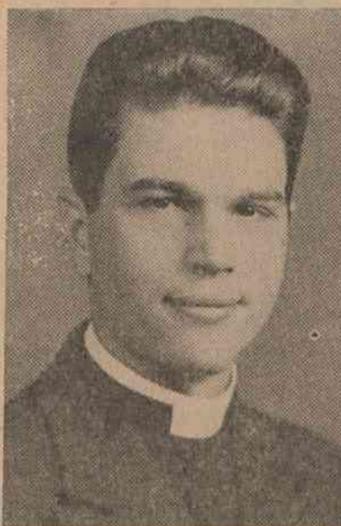

The current international affairs of all the major countries will be discussed in order to help students to get a complete survey of news from all the world.

The International Relations club is seeking complete student and faculty participation. Dr. Confer or Dr. Ancombe will act as advisor at each meeting. From time to time outside speakers will attend the meetings.

Each meeting will be in the recreation or living room of Biting at seven o'clock and will last approximately 45 minutes. Posters will be posted a week in advance stating the topic for discussion in order that the students may read something about the subject.

Pierrettes Select Play For Contest

The Feast of the Holy Innocents is the one-act comedy the Pierrettes have chosen to present in the Carolina Dramatic Association State Contest to be held in Chapel Hill on the fourth, fifth, and sixth of April. The characters in the play are: Cornelia Milk and Electa Milk, two maiden ladies who have seen better days. They are living in Millet, Wisconsin.

Mrs. Oberly, the blacksmith's wife. Jennie, her daughter, young and rather stupid.

Mrs. Oman, formerly of Millet, who married and went to live in the city.

Try-outs were held Wednesday night in Old Chapel, but the cast has not been definitely chosen yet. It will probably be announced next week.

The Pierrette entry this year is their first in four years. On a basis of their former performances, the Carolina Dramatic Association has allowed the Pierrettes to enter the contest without attending the preliminary try-out in Asheville. If, however, there are more entries than expected, the Association has planned to send a representative on March 30 to judge the play. The comedy will be presented on that date, along with two freshman productions, in the Old Chapel.

was a naughty boy tonight. He doesn't always act like that . . . No, we never have stage fright. We are only a little excited before each performance . . . Narrow escapes? No, never.

(We felt self-conscious and the radiator beneath us, the only seat in the room, got hotter. We tried a cooler subject.)

No, we have no children, but we have a dog. He's very musical and a cocker spaniel. He sits under the pianos and listens attentively when we practice. We've been married fourteen years—we met sixteen years ago when I entered the Paris Conservatory as Pierre's pupil.

(We asked, "As his star pupil?") He shook his head violently, no, as my star girl!

(He has a one track mind leading only to Genia.)

Pierre loves bridge, but I hate cards. I love books and walks with my dog.

Pierre . . . I like my girl!

Question Of The Week

In answer to the question, "What topics would you like to discuss in open forum in assembly?", Salemites gave a variety of interesting and illuminating replies.

Eva Martin Bullock: Major world problems. Let's see if there are any thinking students on Salem campus.
Jean Griffin: Let's discuss the lack of enthusiasm in everything we try to do.

Teau Council: We need some good discussion on whether or not couples should be married before they finish their education and other problems along that line.

Sal Mills: What's going on in the world—especially the strike situation.

Kat Wagoner: School spirit.
Peggy Witherington: World affairs—to create an interest in them.

Bernice Bunn: Everybody would like to know about Salem's standards and the grading system here.
Agnes Bowers: The racial question.
Mildred Hughes: Current news topics would be interesting.

Sarah Montagne: The need of more cooperation in school projects.

Annabel Allen: How to have more fun at Salem College!

Frieda Spangler: Let's hear all sides of major school problems.

Anne Folger: Topics of national interest, so we can exchange opinions now on subjects which will be even more important to us in a few years.

Mary Porter Evans: Anything modeled after Town Meeting would be swell.

Emma Mitchell: Student opinions on school problems.

Janet Russell: Socialized medicine.
Ann Dungan: Topics of world importance.
