Speakers Present Ideas On Women's Education

Symposium Week brought to Salem four speakers of national importance to speak on women's education. Mrs. Grace Elliott represented the field of religion, Mrs. J. J. Clark, the field of women in business, Dr. L'Esperance, the field of medicine, and Harrison Smith, the field of women in literature.

Mr. Harrison Smith drew Symposium Week to a close last night with his speech on "Women in Literature."

"You don't have to be a genius," writers open." Women in literature tremendous field for the women said Mr. Smith. "There is a is not a new phase. Mr. Smith began with Sappho in his history of women in literature. He continued through the 18th Century of journalism of diary and letterwriting, past to the 19th Century. "Three of the greatest women of the 19th Century are Jane Austen, author of the novel on manners and satire; Charlotte Bronte, romantic and melodramatic author; and George Eliot, a realistic author interested in morality."

Mr. Smith continued his history of women in literature by pointing out the "incredible swarms" of American women writers after World War I.

Women are becoming more skillful in their art and the days of being ashamed to be known as a woman author, or of hiding from the neighbors, and of using a man's name is gone forever. Women are needed badly in literature now.

During the "open season on Smith," Mr. Smith answered questions. For women who think they have little power in creative art but who want to write must "tackle all little magazines. Things that are written need printing."

Mrs. Grace Loucks Elliott, general secretary of the National Y. W. C. A., opened the Symposium lectures Monday night with a discussion of "Women in Religion."

She traced the development of the place and importance of women in the growth of religion from the time of Christ up to the present day.

Mrs. Elliot emphasized the fact that a woman's most important religious duty is always in her own home. In speaking of women in religion outside of the home, she stated that women are not generally accepted in the pulpits of churches as ministers. Often when women have not been able to take their place in the church, they have organized other movements on a Christian basis, such as the Y. W. C. A., the Red Cross, and the W. C. T. U.

Most women in religious training should prepare to teach and direct the educational programs of churches. Mrs. Elliot said that the basic areas for undergraduate training for religious work should be in the fields of religion, economics, sociology, psychology, and history. There should be more equality of men and women in this field than in any others, if men are willing to give in to women a little, and if women are adequately prepared for the job.

Mrs. Shannon Jansen Clark, prominent member of the American Association of Bank Women, spoke on "Women in Business" in Memorial Hall Tuesday night. Mr. Charles M. Norfleet, president of the First National Bank of this city, introduced the speaker for the evening.

"Make your own opportunity," advised Mrs. Clark. Making one's own opportunity consists of working hard, long hours, and feeling that no task is too small. The successful business woman should choose

Chorus To Sing Sunday Night

The Choral Ensemble, Men's Chorus and the Y. W. C. A. will combine their organizations in presenting an All-College Vesper Service Sunday afternoon at 5:00 P. M. in the Home Moravian Church. An interesting feature of the service is that the entire program is presented by the students of Salem College. Members of the Y. W. C. A. Cabinet will act as ushers.

Following the organ prelude, the mixed chorus will sing "Softly Now the Light of Day" while Frances Carr, president of the Y. W. C. A., presents the Call to Worship. Three numbers will then be sung by the Choral Ensemble: "Now Thank We All Our God" by Bach, "Ave Maria" by Areadelt, "O Bone Jesu" by Palestrina. After this, Virginia Smith will read the scripture and Conway Pruett will offer the prayer. Betty Lou Ball and Geraldine Allgood will sing "Living for Jesus" by Lowen, after which the Men's Chorus will sing two numbers: "Lo How a Rose'er Blooming" by Praetorius and "Onward Christian Soldiers" by Sullivan.
