

Salem Will Celebrate Founder's Day Monday

The students of Salem College will celebrate Founder's Day with a half-holiday Monday, October 6. The celebration honors the founders of the college, which this year is in its 176th school session. The founders were early Moravian settlers who in 1772 began Salem Female Academy which has culminated in two institutions, Salem College and Salem Academy.

Dr. Douglas Rights, pastor of Trinity Moravian Church, will deliver the Founder's Day address at a student assembly at 10:20 a. m. Tuesday, October 7. The assembly will be for both college and academy students.

Faculty Lists More Changes

There are a few new faculty additions and corrections which have not previously been announced by the Salemite.

Miss Helen Bedon of Miami, Florida, comes to Salem to assume Mr. Higgins' duties as an instructor in chemistry. Miss Bedon received her Bachelor of Arts degree in science from Meredith College and her Master of Arts degree in science from the University of North Carolina.

Professor Roy J. Campbell has been appointed acting head of the Science Department, temporarily replacing Professor Charles Higgins who is recuperating from a serious operation.

Mrs. B. C. Dunford, Jr., will teach piano this year. Mrs. Dunford, the former Nancy Ridenhour, is a graduate of Salem College and has studied in New York with Edwin Hughes. While at Salem she was a student of Dean Charles G. Vardell.

Dr. H. S. Jordan is now the head of the Language Department.

Mrs. C. M. Hackler who received her Bachelor of Arts degree at the Women's College of the University of North Carolina is an assistant in the department of education and psychology.

Music Major Gives Recital

Betty Jean Holleman, senior music major at Salem College, initiated a series of fall concerts at Glade Valley School near Sparta last Saturday night when she gave a concert on the new Steinway grand piano there. The mixed chorus sang several selections at intervals during the program.

Glade Valley School is a boarding school for boys and girls of high school age. It is an affiliate of the Presbyterian Church. A number of concerts through the fall have been planned in the cultural interests of the students. Betty Jean has previously played for them on the organ.

Betty Jean presented a varied program including selections from the classic school as well as more modern and familiar works. Bach's "Jesu, Joy of Man's Desiring" opened the program. Particularly brilliant in performance were two Preludes by Chopin and the "Rhapsody in E Flat" by Brahms. Among the others were "Valse Romantique" and "Clair de Lune" by Debussy and "Romance" by Sibelius.

Jane Lovelace Receives Honor

Jane Lovelace, a 1946 graduate of Salem College, has been awarded a scholarship at Tulane University in New Orleans by The National Foundation for the Prevention of Polio. This scholarship provides for all of Jane's expenses while she is studying for her Masters Degree in social work at the Tulane School of Social Work.

The scholarship was awarded on a competitive basis and required recommendations from Duke Medical School, Tulane University, and Salem College where Jane has studied.

While at Salem, Jane was very active in campus organizations. She was vice-president of the Y Cabinet, literary editor of the Sights and Insights and a member of "Who's Who" and the order of the Scorpion.

Dr. Depp Speaks At Chapel Here

"Living in an Unchanging World" was the topic of Dr. Mark Depp's talk in chapel Tuesday morning. Dr. Depp is the pastor of Centenary Methodist Church, and came to Winston-Salem a year ago from Pittsburgh. He received degrees from Allegheny College and the Boston School of Theology, and is widely known as a speaker.

Dr. Depp approached his subject first from the standpoint of the basic human emotions. He said that, in the deep things of human experience, time is of little consequence. Next, Dr. Depp stated that we live in an unchanging world from the standpoint of the laws of science. It is not that we do different things from those of our ancestors, we just do them differently. Lastly, he pointed out that we live in an unchanging world from the standpoint of moral laws. Man does not live by his own laws, but by the unwritten laws of God, which do not change.

Choral Group To Present Concert Soon

The Salem College Choral Ensemble, under the direction of Mr. Paul Peterson, will give its first concert of the year in Hickory, N. C., Friday night, October 24. The entire organization of over 60 members will be the guests of the St. Cecilia Music Club until they return Saturday.

The next scheduled concert will be a candlelight Vesper Service in the Home Moravian Church on December 14. The members of the church choir will also participate.

Other performances, including a spring tour, are now being planned. These programs will consist of all types of music: chorales, 17th century contrapuntal music, madrigals, spirituals, folk songs, excerpts from operas and semi-classical songs.

Salemite Staff To Hear Talks

Frances Griffin of the Winston-Salem Journal staff will be the first in a series of speakers who will talk to members of the editorial staff of the Salemite. She will speak Tuesday night at 7 o'clock in the Salemite office.

Several members of the Journal-Sentinel staff, including Bonnie Angelo and Annie Lee Singletary, will appear at subsequent meetings to discuss merits and faults of the Salemite and to give advice to aspiring writers.

The symposiums are required for staff members, and any interested students are invited to attend.

Lablings Meet; Elect Officers

The Lablings elected new officers at the first business meeting of the year which was held in Park Hall Monday night.

Mary Willis of Winston-Salem was elected secretary; Jane Chandler of Clio, S. C., treasurer; and Betty Griffin of Durham, club reporter.

The next meeting was scheduled for October 13. Kathryn Ballew, president, presided.

Cerf Will Appear As First Lecturer In Series

Bennett Cerf, noted columnist, publisher and humorist, will speak in Memorial Hall October 9, as the first lecturer in the 1947-48 Lecture Series. Mr. Cerf has become something of a literary lion among those who have a lively appreciation for the humorous anecdote.

BENNETT CERF

With the publication of a collection of humorous items, Try and Stop Me, and his latest book, Anything For A Laugh, Mr. Cerf holds unquestioned lead as the nation's Number One refurbisher, collector and inventor of jokes.

Back of this reputation as a raconteur lie years of unparalleled achievement in the publishing field. Born in Manhattan, the son of a New York lithographer, he attended Columbia University and acquired a Phi Beta Kappa membership and a B. A. degree in 1919. After a year of study at Columbia's School of Journalism he was reporter on the New York Herald Tribune and later switched to a Wall Street brokerage firm. He then became a member of the staff of the publishing house of Boni and Liveright. After two years he and his partner managed to buy out its most substantial asset, the Modern Library. In 1927, with the profits from this venture, they founded Random House.

Cerf's authors today embrace such diverse temperaments as Sinclair Lewis, Quentin Reynolds, Vincent Sheean, William Faulkner, S. J. Perelman, Andre Malraux; such poets as Isherwood and Auden; and the playwrights, Eugene O'Neill, Clare Booth Luce, Kaufman and Hart, Lindsay and Crouse and many others.

Those who know Bennett Cerf are frankly staggered by the quantity of work he can cram into a single day. He thinks nothing of reading an important manuscript far into the night; starting off the next day by entertaining an author at breakfast; putting in a good stint of work at his office; writing one of his several magazine columns for either The Saturday Review of Literature or for Omnibook; and dashing off to make a broadcast. His quieter evenings are spent with authors or theatrical celebrities or at Broadway first nights.

Moser Elected House President

Patsy Moser was elected house president of Clewell Dormitory Monday night.

Patsy, who is from Gastonia, is a member of the junior class. She is majoring in Home Economics and will go into a year of internship in Dietetics when she finishes her work at Salem.

The past year Patsy has been active in various campus organizations. She has been a member of the Lablings, the Spanish Club, and the Freshman Dramatics Club. For two years she has been a cheer-leader for the class of '49, and this year Patsy is on the business staff of the annual. She is also serving as reporter for the Home Economics Club.

Patsy replaces Louise Dodson, who did not return to Salem this fall. Betty Wolfe, of Charlotte, N. C., was nominated also as a candidate for the office.

Welch Will Give Graduate Exam

Miss Welch, head of the psychology department will administer a graduate record examination on October 27 and 28 to those who are interested. This examination is a measure of general education in eight fields with advanced test in major subject. It is recognized as standard throughout the country and designed for graduate or prospective graduate students. A large number of graduate schools in both the United States and Canada recommend and many require results of this examination as one of the credentials for admission.

The fee for the examination is five dollars. Students interested in applying should see Miss Welch in her office in Main Hall on any day between 12 o'clock and 1. All applicants for the October 27 and 28 examination must register with Miss Welch before noon, Thursday, October 9.

The examination is administered four times each year on a nationwide basis.

Freshmen Rabbits Have Rude Awakening

Wednesday . . .
7:00: Got up in time to make the breakfast line.
8:00: Fixed my room and made the bed.
8:25: Started classes. Remembered to ask plenty of intelligent questions and looked alert.
2:00: Began tour of tobacco plants and grocery stores to get a burlap bag for Friday.
6:00: Returned to school. Entered dining room by side door.
7:00 to 10:00: Buried myself in a third floor seminar room.
10:01: Crept back to the dorm and tried to make myself inconspicuous—it was hard—for the rest of the night.
10:30: Had a Rude Awakening.
Thursday . . .
6:00: Got up to get breakfast for four sophomores across the hall.
8:00: Fixed up two other rooms.

8:10: Tied black book around my neck and remembered to carry pint jar.
8:25: Fell into a chair in History. Asked one question. Tried to look awake.
1:00: Emptied ashes and dashed to lunch. Ate a square meal and got dyspepsia.
2:00 to 6:00: Wrote ten letters, ran errands, and was embarrassed in innumerable ways.
7:00: Buried myself in a seminar.
7:05: Was yanked out by an unsympathetic sophomore.
10:30: Collapsed after an evening of utter misery.
. . . and Friday
5:00: Got up in time to get breakfast for eight sophomores.
5:05: Started dressing. Had a little difficulty with the coat-hanger theory of applying rabbit ears, but by 6:00: Was all fixed up.

8:00: Started making many beds. Left my own in a mess. What's the use?
8:25: Remembered at the last minute to go to class. Thought it best not to ask any questions and give myself away.
10:00: The tail of my burlap bag began to get in the way. My black stockings started to slide down, and I had dropped my jar three times, spilling hundreds of cigarette butts.
1:00: Had to do several peculiar things during lunch; acquired three fiances.
2:00 to 6:00: "Life on a Hockey Field" or "I'd Rather Die". Can't bear to think of it again.
6:00: Tried to eat dinner, but couldn't get very far.
7:00: SOPHOMORE COURT You you know as well as I do.
