New Salemites Tell Tales About Their Ex-Salemite Sisters

by Janet Zimmer and Sis Pooser

Besides the work of Miss Kirkland toward getting students to come to Salem, it seems we have another force at work. Pictured above are a number of new students whose older sisters have attended Salem. They were all influenced, to their advantage, to come here by these ex-Salemites.

Cacky Reid, a junior transfer from Hollins, is right at home in Winston. She is a science major and loves her three labs a week. Her sister, June Reid, graduated from Salem in 1946. Cacky's pet peeve is the telephone on 2nd floor Clewell.

Lou Davis, a tall, brown-eyed freshman from Morganton is a Primary Education major. After three years at St. Mary's, she enjoys the privileges at Salem. Her sister Ann Carter graduated in 1946.

Barbara Fisher, from Concord, is following in her big sister Margaret's footsteps by majoring in Organ. Her sister, incidentally, graduated in 1948. Barbara is crazy about Memorial Hall and banana salads.

Blake Carter is that sparkling brunette from Rocky Mount. Her sister Margaret graduated from Salem last year. Blake likes to knit and is at present working on a pair of pink booties (for a friend). She says she would be content to live on chocolate cake and milk for the rest of her life.

Daisy Chonis, a Home Economics major from Monroe, keeps the grocery store down the street in business. She is a chronic gum-chewer and the pride and joy of her sister Effie, a member of the Sophomore Class.

Sally Senter "live-wire" from Albemarle, loves sports especially hockey and basketball. Her sister Ticka graduated in 1947. Sally is a voice major. She loves steaks "the thick variety, please."

Sophie Hobson, hailing from Salisbury, is as yet undecided about her major. Her sister Ann graduated in 1944. Sophie is a crossword fiend, so she says. She's rather fond of steaks, fried onions, and swimming.

Joanna Webber, the red-headed day student, is a transfer from Mary Washington. She claims food as one of her big "loves" and listening to classical music as her greatest pleasure. Her sister Nancy went to Salem in 1944. Joanna is an English major.

Deb Ball

room of the hotel. Among those seen at the dance were Tootsie Gillespie with her chief, Earle Myers; and Jane Bowman with Dan Walser, Jr. Tootsie was wearing a changeable green taffeta that featured small gathers in the back that dipped at the hem. Jane was wearing a lovely black velvet hat trimmed in small cherries.

Frances Morrison and Shirley Baker were seen having breakfast Thursday morning with their marshalls. Frances' chief was Bill Browne, Jr. and Shirley's was Richard Barnwell. Both these Salemites were wearing sweaters and skirts, but the glow from the night before was still there.

Another dance was held Thursday for the Debs, their chief marshal and escorts, and for post-debs. Larry Clinton played for this dance also.

Among those ex-Salemites who made their Debuts were Jean Gattis with Sam Gattis, Lou Ogburn with Robert Currier, and Blanche Hicks with Charlie Neill, Jr. Other Salemites who attended the ball were Dot Arrington, Maggie Hudson, Carolyn Taylor and Sara Walston.
