

Casual Comments

Signs of spring are getting more common each day on the campus whether it be just a smile or a new cotton dress we have noticed:

The cherry tree which blooms right outside of the Romanticism class room window—very conducive to appreciation of Wordsworth we would think.

Bunnie Pierce has sprouted a new hair-do in honor of the lazy days ahead.

Miss Anna's pansies are in full bloom behind the Alumnae House. If you haven't noticed them yet, go take a look, but no fair snitching any.

Doris Keith had a bright green evening dress on for the Choral Ensemble concert the other night. Very gay and lively for such a merry concert.

Most any afternoon at three you can see brown and red ice cream cones making their way across the square on that return trip from the Post Office.

Whether it's to give us a better appetite or just to make us aware of spring we don't know; but we are grateful for the pretty new flower arrangements in the dining room.

Peggy Watkin's undying enthusiasm for anything connected with the AA even on hot days like these.

Dotty Clemmer's bright and cheery smile which makes the days even better. Glad she doesn't just save it for someone special.

"In the spring a young man's fancy" and it must have been so for somebody, Lou Huntley knows judging from all those roses she received this week.

The French's children have been out aiding nature and their mother by digging the earth around the yellow primroses in their garden.

Jane Kugler came out in a cheerful plaid cotton with leg o' mutton sleeves in celebration of spring. And from what we have heard, more cute cottons will soon be forthcoming from those busy home ec. majors, who make clothes while learning.
