

Duke Fan, Ruth Van Hoy Brings Salem Students Joy

by Polly Hartle

If you ever hear a joyous shout emerging from the Day Student Center that Duke's gonna beat Carolina, you'll know that it's Ruth Van Hoy, campaigning for her favorite team. She's one in a hundred. Ruth, the day student fun maker, has an overflowing pocketful of jokes, witty remarks and bits of satire. She supplies us all with a new chuckle every day.

Ruth is majoring in sociology and economics and minoring in psychology. Between trips to Graylyn (required observations) and fund soliciting trips, she finds ample time for her many "extra" interests. She is an enthusiastic worker with the Y. W. C. A., a member of the Order of the Scorpion and the Education Club and is a Senior Advisor. Ruth loves to sing; she takes an active interest in her church choir. She admits a weakness for good mystery stories which consume her in-between spots of relaxation.

Ruth, a senior, is eagerly looking forward to graduation, after which she plans to enter case work. She wants to work in this field for a few years before entering graduate school.

If not in the Day Student Center, Ruth can usually be found in Biting basement discussing the ways of the world, or on third floor Strong expounding vocal theories with the music majors. If you have a chip on your shoulder, look her up. Her daily joke will set you right.

Dr. Singer's classes may leave us breathless, but we freely admit we never before knew as much about contemporary and past world affairs. We're looking forward to his next appearance in chapel when everyone can hear him.

That this is the last NOTE OF INTEREST!!
