

Brides-To-Be Ready Togs For Big Events

by Liz Leland

The Bells are Ringing in the ears of all the seniors as May 29 arises ever nearer, and visions of black caps and gowns, diplomas, and Dr. Gramley, dance through our knowledge packed heads. The majority of us hear only these bells, but our pretty group of brides-to-be, Ah! They hear the louder and more resonant climes of wedding bells, while trousseau clothes, honeymoons, and the men of the hour dance through their heads. If you don't know the girls who compose this small group, simply look for the biggest smiles and the brightest faces in Bitting when the month of June is mentioned. Geography, the H Bomb, Shakespeare, and Calculus all belong to another world when these girls start planning their weddings and buying their trousseaus.

Our first radiant June bride will be Miss Dot Massey, of May Queen fame. Her trousseau is exquisite, but I would like to tell you about one dress in particular. It is an afternoon dress of baby blue organza, with the rustling effect of a taffeta petticoat. The sleeves are capped, and deep cherry velvet ribbons stream from the waist to the hem. Dot plans to wear dyed-to-match opera pumps with this creation. Very pretty, Miss Massey.

On June 16, the Wedding March will be played for Miss Betty Belle Sheppe, who has her Hope Chest crammed to the brim with linen, bedspreads, and towels. A pink, lace trimmed nylon ensemble has been ordered from New York, but Easter vacation will be trousseau buying time for Betty Belle.

Our own Miss Louise Stacy, also to be married in June, had stars in her eyes as she described her trousseau to me. Hugh will have stars in his eyes also when he sees Louise wearing her dark brown and white sharkskin suit with the perky little straw hat to match, the dressy light tan and sky blue dress, and the tailored pink linen dress with a pink linen hat. Among her trousseau cottons, Louise has a light blue waffle pique off the shoulder dress, which is trimmed around the neck and sleeves with Hamburg lace, and a gray dressy dress with a pointed cape effect in the back and a sweetheart neckline in the front. Nylon ensembles are to be quite popular this June, and Louise has a dainty set, which is distinguished by seed pearls studded around the puckered waist.

On June 24, Miss Sara Hamrick will claim Dave as her very own. Sara has already bought many beautiful creations. Some of the outstanding ones are: a black crepe dress with long sleeves and a marquisette yoke bordered with lace; a gray shantung dress and jacket, which is trimmed with white pique; a very lacy white blouse to wear with a fitted navy blue suit, which is trimmed in silver buttons with rhinestone centers; an off the shoulder navy blue crepe dress, which has changeable light blue taffeta at the neckline; a caped cotton aqua sun dress; and a dark wine cotton dress with a scalloped neckline. Sara's favorite nylon ensemble is of light green with accordion pleated ruffles. There is no doubt but that blonde Sara will be a knockout in these clothes.

The bells are a little further off for Miss Mary Anne Spillman, who will be married in the early winter of this year.

Mary won't be buying her trousseau for quite a few months yet, but that doesn't stop her from filling her Hope Chest. Her linen is in pastel colors, consisting of pale blue monogrammed in white, light green monogrammed in dark green, and pale yellow monogrammed in light green. Mary Anne is all set as far as the table goes, for she (Continued from page six) will sing on Monday, March 6th, at 8:00 at the Winston-Salem Teachers College. The event is being sponsored by the Shriners to raise money for the cancer fund. Anyone interested in going may purchase tickets from Russell for 75c.

As if all these accomplishments were not enough Russell also has started a local Parent-Teachers Association of which he is ex-president and current program chairman.

And if you think your four years at Salem go by in a hurry just talk to Russell sometime about how quickly 31 years can roll up on you.

I have visited Cuba, Canada, Puerto Rico and have lived in Trinidad, but I found Trinidad the most interesting of them all. I shall remember my stay there as long as I live.

Soft music—deep carpets—mirrored walls—beautiful clothes—delicious food—what could be finer? The Seniors were deep in the lap of luxury on Tuesday, February 7, when Snead and Craven went all out with a tea and fashion show for them.

Salemities who attended the tea lounged in the newly decorated upstairs of the store and watched the latest spring fashion parade created especially for them.

Models for the occasion were chosen from the Junior class. Betty Beal, Jane Hart, Sybel Haskins, Lucy Harper, Betty Griffin, and Peggy Osborne were the six lucky girls who had a chance to sample new spring outfits. These girls looked so professional that they might find a career cut out for them in New York after graduation.

Betty Beal looked adorable in a navy blue linen dress. The sailor collar on this one is reminiscent of second grade days. With it, Betty wore a close fitting navy blue hat trimmed with white.

An interesting color effect was modeled by Betty Griffin who wore a tan tweed suit with a rose figured scarf. The clever hat-to-match duplicated the material of the scarf. Navy blue certainly must be the (Continued on page three)
