

Mr. Brandt, professor of art, examines some of the reproductions in the Swiss book collection now on display in the library.

Rare Swiss Books Are On Display This Week

The faculty and students have a rare opportunity this week to see a collection of Swiss books on display in the library. Highlights of this exhibition are reproductions of the paintings of Paul Klee, Chinese ink drawing of the seventh century and a collection of Swiss flags.

The 50 books which are on display are a part of the 700 volume collection of books published in Switzerland since 1940. These books were made available through the Swiss legation and are currently being displayed at colleges and public libraries all over the country.

The section here includes only the art, architecture and travel sections of the whole collection. The outstanding feature is a portfolio of reproductions of Paul Klee, a modern Swiss painter who died in 1940. Mr. Brandt said, "He is the sole modern Swiss artist who has influenced present-day painters." Mr. Barker said that Klee had developed a highly personal style based on visual phenomena which science later proved correct.

The amazing thing about these reproductions and the other books in the collection to the amateur critic are the wonderful colors of the reproductions. Once again the Swiss are showing their amazing craftsmanship in technique of getting precise colors. Another thing to notice is the highly artistic work in printing, publishing and the beautiful binding of the books.
