

Shake Up The Make-Up Or Chase The Space

The Salem staff would like to reveal the story of this issue, a story quite real. It's not an anecdote we wish to print, for at this moment the staff is quite spent. It all started last week, Saturday we'll say, when our editor said in her quiet way, "Shall we have an eight page paper next week?" The staff said, "Yes, and copy we'll seek." All went well Monday and Tuesday. Some copy was checked for Tuesday was newsday. Features piled in all typed and revised. The headlines were the best ever devised. The make-up was finished, all by lines included. Proof readers read proof and their job was concluded. Then what should appear but a

3 x 8 ad, An ad for which no possible room could be had. The make-up editor began anew. She and the editor were now in a stew. They squeezed and they squeezed, but no room could they find. They searched for an answer of any kind. 'Twas no use — only one answer made itself plain. The paper had to be enlarged again. And so the story which we relate explains the ten pages instead of eight.

(Continued from page one) For this is Christmas. This is Christmas 1951—a Christmas of fear and insecurity. A black Christmas? Within the hearts of us at Salem is found a light, the seed of peace. Silent Night, Holy Night—wherever voices join in carols there will always be the spirit of Christmas.

Lucy Harris will have that Christmas look also in a red velvet ballerina dress. The top is very different-looking—it has a halter effect. Her date will be Charlie Brown.

Dec. 25

(Continued from page two) December twenty-fourth is a Fast Day until the first star appears; then the Christmas Supper begins. After the supper the boys and girls sing carols in the streets and carry "Zopkas" with marionettes performing upon its stage the traditional Nativity Play. The "Festival of the Star", as the Polish call their celebration, is brought to a close with the celebration at midnight of the "Shepherd's Mass."

Great Christmas music is Russia's gift to the world. The Russian composers have brought their inspiration to the highest in their creation of music for the Christmas Mass.

The Swedish "Julafon" reveals the full magic of the Nordic Christmas. Saint Lucy, wearing a white robe with a brilliant red sash, opens Christmas Day at six-thirty in the morning and a torchlight procession lights up the dark groves and snowy fields, while the sleigh bells fill the crisp air.

Pageants, mass, torchlight processions and singing are a part of Christmas all over the world. Man finds a tie that binds in the celebration of the birth of Christ.
