Miss Marsh Wins First Prize For Essay On Bible Verse

Miss Lelia Graham Marsh, Salem College Alumnae secretary, was the first winner in the Journal's Bible verse contest.

As first prize Miss Marsh received "The Holy Bible Designed to Be Read As Living Literature." This makes her 20th Bible.

The only rule for entering the contest is that the contestant write a 150-word letter interpreting one of the Lenten verses printed in

I Also Ran

Then the Stee Gee president announces the results and—Candidate is not among the winners.

Assembly is over. Applause and shouting and congratulations fill the hall. Candidate wants to be alone, but she must be a good loser. As Candidate stands in the back of the auditorium waiting to "hail the conquering hero" in a good sportsmanlike manner, she is first encountered by—"the eyes."

Friends come up and express their sympathy as if Candidate had just lost a beloved relative. Friends pat her on the back and look sympathetically at Candidate with mournful eyes. "I came to assembly just to vote for you," one supporter whispers to her. Others pass and catch hold of her hand and squeeze it slightly. Candidate forgets her good sportsmanship for a rebellious moment and wonders why, if all these people feel so badly about her being defeated, she had lost the election at all.

At lunch congratulations are sung and the victors are applauded. Candidate tries to be enthusiastic and gay, but she doesn't fool many people. All afternoon the post-mortem continues. People simply won't leave Candidate alone. But the real friend finally comes along.

"You are now officially a member of the I. A. R. or some people prefer to call it the I. R. A. (I Ran Anyway). We have oodles of members, and you are now one of our group of the mighty who fell."

the Journal.

The passage that Miss Marsh chose was: "And it came to pass, when the days were well nigh come that He should be received up, He steadfastly set His face to go to Jerusalem." Luke 9:51.

Miss Marsh wrote, "This means (to me) the acceptance of the Divine Plan and Purpose of the earthly life of Jesus," that His mission was "to set the perfect pattern . . . to absolve the sin of the world . . . to offer salvation . . . to teach . . ."

The Christian who follows these examples will be able "to face up 'steadfastly' to daily crises . . . to progress . . . and to achieve a passport to Eternal Life and Citizenship in the New Jerusalem," concluded Miss Marsh.

Day Students Plan Mystery

The Day Student Organization will present their annual chapel program Tuesday, March 18.

Faye Fuller is in charge of the program which will be a takeoff on a popular radio detective show.

The main role of chief detective will be played by Nancy Ann Ramsey, with Elissa Hutson and Anna Katherine Dobson filling the parts of announcer and commercial reader.

An important mystery will be solved on the program by taking a tour of the campus, including special points and people of interest. These people will be portrayed and interpreted by the Day Students.
