Electric Organ To Be Placed In Dining Room

An electronic organ has been given to Salem College to be used by music students. This organ is a gift from a friend of the institution who lives in Winston-Salem.

The organ has been ordered and is expected to be placed in the large dining room of Corrin Rectory sometime during Easter vacation.

The console is a standard type organ having all the stops and pedals of a regular pipe organ.

This organ is to be used by Salem College organ students for practice purposes.

It will also be played during dinner by organ majors who will arrange programs for these special occasions.

Faith

(Continued from page two) scientists do not believe in God, but they must be so conceited that they will not admit a being greater than themselves. A few scientists fall into this group, not as scientists, but as men. It is only a greater sin for a scientist to reject this belief in God, for he has been given the greater gift of understanding the complexity of his world.

Soph Wins Award

Peggyan Alderman, soprano soloist competing against 10 contestants in state auditions, won the Marie Keith scholarship. The auditions were held Saturday at Woman's College in Greensboro.

Filling Late Sunday Wakers Will Be Painful For Juniors

By Emma Sue Larkins

Sophomores—beware! The freshmen aren't after you, but the juniors are. Next year you will be the juniors. You will have two more overnights; you will have "little sisters" to take out to eat; and you will give the seniors a delightful banquet.

However, this fright is nothing compared with the way you'll feel when you walk into the basement of Clewell at 9:00 on Sunday mornings and realize that "TODAY IS YOUR DAY TO HAVE JUNIOR BREAKFAST."

Those girls in pajamas who are hurrying to get to Church will be your customers — your problems. You can't be responsible for having their stomachs growl in church. YOU are going to have to feed them! YOU are going to have to feed them every Sunday morning for nine months. That's thirty-six Sundays except for holidays when mothers take over your pajamaed customers, or "Big Week-ends" when Carolina gentlemen take over your—er—dressed customers.

Now that you are acquainted with your responsibility—what are your problems?

Help is your biggest and most absorbing problem. This problem may be divided into several phases.

First of all there is the problem of getting help—not hired help but class spirit help. You think there's a difference? There is! Hired help are paid for their work in money—class spirit help are paid for their work in coffee. It's as simple as that.

Your next problem will be the competence of your class spirit help. You can't fire them, so you'll have to be patient with them. You'll have to remember that this is Sunday morning after Saturday night. If someone burns the toast, you'll have to remember that she got pinned last night. There's a symbol in her madness. Burning love equals burning toast or visa versa.

If and when you solve these problems, you will have to talk with Miss Covington about the labor-union problem. Most of your help will be a member of the union, and their motto is "We don't work after 10:15, no matter
