Salem Chooses Elsie Macon As "Miss Student Teacher"

By Jean Davenport

Elsie Macon of Raleigh began her exams with a new identity, that of Miss Representative Student Teacher of Salem College. After facing a "screening committee" of Salem faculty members and school officials, Elsie was notified of her selection.

She completed her practice teaching before Christmas in the first and second grades at Sedge Garden and North Elementary schools. "The best teacher is one who really loves to teach," observed Elsie.

An elementary teacher has a big challenge, Elsie claims. She has to teach her students how to read from the very beginning. She added that, "sometimes they don't even know how to tell time or to tie their shoes."

Elsie thinks that it's most important that her students like her, although an elementary teacher has to maintain discipline. "Dislike of his teacher can make a child hate school all the way through."

Elsie found that by treating her students as people who have ideas and problems of their own she became a friend as well as a teacher. The success of her philosophy is apparent in the attitude of one of her little girls who said, "When I grow up I'm going to change my name to Miss Macon."

When she was a counsellor at Camp Morehead two summers ago, Elsie became interested in teaching small children. She had a group of six and seven year olds. "I washed faces, brushed teeth and tied shoes all summer and loved it," she said.

Some of her children at Sedge Garden had never been on a train. As part of a unit on transportation, she planned a train trip. Early one morning Elsie took "her children" to the train station in Greensboro. They toured the station, bought tickets, and boarded the train for Winston-Salem.

The children ate candy sent by the father of one of the students. The porter demonstrated making up a berth, and Elsie said she had as good a time as the children.

Elsie will represent Salem at a North Carolina Education Association meeting in Asheville in March. There she will be presented along with other Representative Student Teachers from various colleges.

A senior at Salem, Elsie has a major in English. This year she is president of the I. R. S. and associate editor of the annual. She is also a member of the May Day committee and has been a member of Future Teachers of America for two years.

She has been a member of the Salem staff for four years and was president of the Canterbury Club her junior year. She has also been vice-president of the Art Club and assistant editor of the annual.

Mrs. Maurita Cox Hughes has been named a new member of the Salem College faculty. Mrs.

Hughes is a graduate of Winthrop College in Rock Hill, S. C. and will be a part time instructor in the Home Economics Department. She will teach beginning and advanced clothing courses. Mrs. Hughes is the wife of Rev. James C. Hughes.

Salem F. T. A. members voted on a proposed state constitution Tuesday night, Feb. 3, and ratified it. In the absence of both president and vice-president, Dr. Welch took over the meeting. Plans were begun for attending the NCEA annual convention in Asheville on March 26, 27, and 28.

Dr. Dale Gramley will lead a panel discussion at W. C. U. N. C. in Greensboro next Tuesday and Wednesday evening in connection with Religious Emphasis Week. The subject of the panel will be religion and education.

Mayor Kurpees of Winston-Salem has appointed Dr. Gramley chairman of the Winston-Salem Education Television Committee, which will study possible use and development of educational television in Winston-Salem.

This Committee is a part of a state wide commission appointed by Governor William Umstead to investigate educational possibilities in television.

The Executive Committee of the North Carolina Foundation of Church Related Colleges, of which Dr. Gramley is secretary-treasurer, will meet at Salem, Thursday, Feb. 12.
