

Day Students Take Excursion

By Drane Vaughn

Last Saturday eleven day students, accompanied by Dr. and Mrs. Michael Lewis, went to Pinehaven Estates on Baden Lake to spend the weekend. Phyllis Tierney had invited all the local Salemites down to her family's summer home at the Lake, which is near Albemarle. Those going early found time to travel the Lake, one of the offshoots of the Yadkin River, in Phyllis's inboard motor craft.

Upon Arrival

After everyone had arrived, chief cooks Florence Sqaugh and Nancy Ramsey Reynolds with the help of Charlotte McGlaughon and Drane Vaughn prepared a big supper of spaghetti and meat sauce, lettuce salad, French bread and coffee. Brownie cookies contributed by Mrs. Lewis and ice cream contributed by a local concern made up the dessert.

While Mary Lou Whiteheart and Ruth McIlroy cleaned up the dishes, the group turned to games of "Hearts" and "Charades." You should have seen Dr. Lewis acting out "Autobiography of Benjamin Franklin" while teammates Betty Ball and Sally Ann Hudson tried to guess the name of the book he was portraying.

When the last batch of fresh popcorn was gone, when the coffee pot was finally empty, the day students began to go to bed — in double-decker bunks, sofa-beds, roll-away beds, camp cots and even sleeping bags. On Sunday morning, with Sara Willard and Sara Watson fixing breakfast, the group ate and cleaned up, and after one more boat ride and one more snapped Kodak picture (ask Sara Watson about one of hers), started home.

A Grand Weekend

In spite of blood-shot eyes, fuzzy minds, and faraway looks, the girls say that it was a grand weekend, and that they especially want to thank Dr. and Mrs. Lewis, their sponsors, for going with them, and Phyllis's parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Tierney, for having them down.

Underclassmen Find Cure For Homesickness, Mothers and Fathers Invade Salem's Campus

By Jean Edwards

Underclassmen have found a cure for homesickness; they invited their mothers and fathers to Salem campus last week-end. Beginning early Saturday, parents started swarming to Salem campus to see their offspring. Daughters conducted their parents on a tour around campus, especially emphasizing the swimming pool and the sun bathers.

Parents Met

Miss Roberts and student hostesses met the parents as they arrived. Clewell Reception Room was filled with parents discussing their own Salem geniuses. Each of the parents received a name card in order to become better acquainted and to play "Do you know who I know?" more easily.

The second annual Parent's Day was sponsored jointly by the freshmen and sophomores, Saturday, March 7. Approximately 100 parents were guests for the occasion.

Presidents Planned

Nellie Ann Barrow, president of the Freshman Class, and Bobbie Kuss, president of the Sophomore Class, were in charge of the arrangements.

Entertainment was planned by Gertie Johnson, Mary Ann Raines, and Ella Ann Lee; Ann Mixon and Sally Reiland worked on lighting, Rose Ann Worthington on props, Betty Lynn Wilson on make-up, and Margaret Blakeney on costumes. Namecards were made for the parents by Joy Dixon, Margi Hartshorn, and Sara Outland. Bobbie Kuss planned the programs.

Parent's Day began officially with parents' registration from 2:00-3:00 in Clewell Reception Room, although parents were invited to attend classes with their daughters Saturday morning. An informal tea was given from 3:00-5:30 in the Friendship Rooms of Strong, where parents were given an opportunity to meet the faculty.

Open House Held

Clewell and South held open house from 3:00-5:30. Dinner was served at 5:30 in the Corrin Refectory where Dr. Gramley spoke on behalf of the faculty, Mr. Lewis Daniels for the parents, Nellie Ann Barrow for the freshmen. (Continued On Page Six)

Randy Writes About Events In Germany

Editor's note: The following is part of a letter received by a Salem student from Ragnild Wurr, a student here last year from Germany:

I wonder how Salem campus looks by now. I guess that soon you will have the first flowers while we are still deep in snow and ice. Sometimes when it is real bitterly cold I think of the weather over there and the winter in Winston-Salem. I wonder how the foreign girl from Austria does feel because they are still having more snow in their country.

The other day I went to see the movie "Gone With the Wind". It was the first time they played this movie in Germany. I liked it very much because so many things reminded me of the South. And especially when they played Dixie I almost cried, and I thought of the many times when you stood up in Chapel singing Dixie full of enthusiasm.

For the moment I am home for vacation. We have three weeks of vacation, but the first one I spent with other students in Tirolian Alps skiing. We had a wonderful time, but on the third day I fell and hurt my ankle. In the beginning of March school starts again and I do hope that I can go down in time for it to Munich, as I hate to miss so much.

Now I plan to finish school as soon as possible and be on my own. Then I want to see England and maybe France. I only wonder what will happen to us Europeans, if we do not agree on the European Defense Community or a United Europe. There are so many countries with their own interests which they do not want to give up, and then the wound between France and Germany seems never to heal.

I have heard from Gunilla and Liisa regularly and they both told me to give you all their love. Gunilla is studying medicine and likes it very much. This summer both of them plan to come to the continent and I hope to see them.
