

MAID OF HONOR ROSE TILLER AND MAY QUEEN NANCY BLUM

Homemakers Cop Honors

Two home economics majors trooped across campus from the Home Management house last week and walked away with the May Court, 1957, titles.

Nancy Blum, climaxed three years on the May Court, was selected May Queen in last week's balloting. Rose Tiller will serve her third year on beauty row as Maid of Honor to the Queen.

Both girls, now completing a six weeks' residence in the practice house, will graduate in June with bachelor of science degrees in home economics.

Nancy, the stately daughter of Mr. and Mrs. R. D. Blum of Winston-Salem, joined the ranks of the boarders during her freshman and senior years. Nancy has been on I. R. S. for three years, in the Pierrettes, a member of the Home Economics Club, and a Junior Marshall. Nancy evaded the question asked about sports; she says that she "just loves to sew and knit."

During her summers, Nancy has modeled at Alderman's Studio in High Point and served on the College Board at Thalheimer's, Winston-Salem. When she was a senior in high school, Nancy was chosen Black and Gold Queen in the consolidated yearbook of the three city high schools. As for her future plans, Nancy says she is planning on doing some type of work, but she has no definite plans.

Rose, the petite, doll-haired daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. B. Tiller of Draper, is a member of the Home Economics Club and the F. T. A. She was also a Marshall her junior year.

Rose enjoys swimming, but her first love is going to football games. When asked about having a hobby, Rose replied that she like to take walks.

The summer before her junior year, Rose worked as a waitress in Yellowstone Park. For part of the summer of 1956 she worked at Virginia Beach. After graduating in June, Rose plans to take a short rest before putting that hard-earned teacher's certificate to work.

Bessie Clarke, Rachel Ray's mother (Rachel is an ex-member of our senior class and now at U. N. C.) was the first May Queen. Mothers of two present Salemites were members of the first court—Cam Boren Boone (Mary Ann's mother) and Jennie Wolfe Stanley (Marcia's mother.) In these first years the court was composed of fourteen beauties instead of the twelve that we have.

Strange as it may seem Salem has had one May Queen crowned twice. Fritz Firey was a little girl queen in 1921 and nine years later as a Salem student was again crowned.

Salem Plays Host To A.A. Meet Thirteen N. C. Colleges Exchange Ideas

"Broaden your plans to include all fans" is the theme of the annual conference of the North Carolina Athletic Federation of College Women (N. C. A. F. C. W.) to which Salem is hostess today and tomorrow, November 2 and 3.

Two general sessions are to be held—one at 2:00 Friday afternoon and the other beginning at 10:00 Saturday morning.

On Friday afternoon Jo Smitherman, a member of Salem's A. A. council, will moderate a panel composed of three faculty and three student members.

The subjects for discussion are: "Is 100% Participation Really Necessary?"; "Are You A. A. (Athletic Association) or R. A. (Recreation Association)?"; "Are Your Participants Award-Seekers?"; and "Are Your Bleachers Bare? Why?"

Faculty panelists will be Miss Doris Hutchinson, Greensboro Public Schools, Dr. James Long from Wake Forest College, and Miss Dorothy Casey from Wake Forest; three students, from Woman's College, Guilford College, and Appalachian will serve on the panel.

Following the panel the delegates will divide into discussion groups to decide individually how to make all fans become active participants in their recreational or athletic program. These groups will report their findings at Saturday's session.

Miss Celeste Ulrich, from the Department of Physical Education of Woman's College, will conclude the convention on Saturday morning with her remarks on the convention's theme.

Dr. Gramley, Salem's president, will have an opportunity to give athletic abilities when he speaks following the banquet Friday night in the Club Dining Room.

During the banquet Gail Landers will provide background music.

The convention will not be one boring meeting after the other. Following the general session on Friday, delegates will have an opportunity to browse through Old Salem.

And, following the banquet, the delegates will change into comfortable clothes and go to Old Chapel where Salem students will provide entertainment. The Choral Ensemble and several Salem students will provide entertainment. Mr. Peterson will lead one of his famous community sings.

Anne Miles, Salem's A. A. president, is going to be most busy during the convention. Besides seeing that the affair is gliding along smoothly, she is presiding at both sessions.

Forty-eight delegates will be spending the night in Salem's dorms. These girls represent Appalachian, Catawba, Duke, East Carolina, Greensboro, Lenior Rhyne, Mars Hill, Meredith, Montreat, Wake Forest, Western Carolina, Wingate, and Woman's College.

Delegates are to register in the Student Union. They may come for only one session if they wish. his view on girls' recreational and

Secret Society Reveals Names Of New Members

Two sisters and four other Salem College upperclassmen were recognized in assembly yesterday as fall inductees into the secret Order of The Scorpion. Dr. Ivy Hixson, academic dean, made the announcement to the student body of new members Jane Wrike, Mary Curtis Wrike, Judy Golden, Martha Ann Kennedy, Shirley Redlack, and Pat Greene.

All activities, officers, and rituals of the Order are kept secret. The entire membership is read only once a year.

Dr. Hixson listed current membership this morning, as including seven seniors, Anne Miles, Madeline Allen, Jo Smitherman, Judy Graham, Mary Walton, and Kay Williams, and Carol Cooke.

Jane Wrike and Mary Curtis Wrike are the daughters of Mr. and Mrs. W. Curtis Wrike of Graham. Jane, a senior history major, plans to teach in elementary school. She transferred to Salem after two years at Saint Mary's Junior College, Raleigh, and this year is business manager of the college yearbook, "Sights and Insights." Having served as stage manager for a college dramatic production last year, Jane is currently a member of the May Day committee and the Athletic Association.

Mary Curtis Wrike, a junior, is majoring in religion and plans to work after college as a director of religious education. Her minor subjects are elementary education and sociology. Mary Curtis is secretary of the Student Government Association, a junior marshal, and a member of the Pierrettes and the Athletic Association.

Martha Ann Kennedy, Covington, Tenn., is associate editor of the college newspaper and worked during the past summer as reporter for the Memphis, Tenn., Press-Scimitar. A member of the college lecture series committee, Martha Ann is majoring in English and has been active in campus dramatics.

The second senior inductee into the Order is Pat Greene of Ahsokie. Pat, president of the Senior class, spent the past summer in France, bolstering her French major. Her vocational interest is teaching. Active in May Day planning, writing for student publications, and past Choral Ensemble activities, Pat's election to president of her Senior class climaxed a series of student offices including vice-president of her Freshman class, president of Clewell dormitory, and secretary of the Student Government Association.

Judy Golden of Leaksville is an English major and a junior. Judy is creative as set designer for the dramatics group and acts as house president of the Junior dormitory. Her major course is English; her vocational plans count on a career in journalism.

A Staesville representative, Shirley Redlack, is the sixth new Scorpion. With a combined curriculum of history and elementary education, Shirley has served as president of her Freshman class and house president of Clewell dormitory. She is currently assist-

Five Freshmen Deck Court

The freshman focus turns this week to the quintet of lovely lassies who represent the class of 1960 on Salem's May Court.

Lou Scales

From across the dell and Rockingham, North Carolina, comes Lou Scales. Last year she was May Queen at the Academy.

She was also captain of the Gold athletic Team, on the annual staff, and a member of the dance committee.

Mr. Wendt has prospect, as Lou is thinking seriously of a sociology major. People are a hobby with her and she is interested in welfare work.

I decided that she either liked "True Love" or lacked the initiative to go across the room to change the last record on the phonograph. A Carolina pennant held the place of honor just over the head of her bed, and there was a picture of John on the desk.

She was the first Stevenson supporter I had found . . . guess she doesn't like Ike!

May Terry

I gave up trying to find her and left a note for May Terry to come to my dorm. She's from Spartanburg, South Carolina, and another member of the May Court.

A lover of drama, she devoted much of her time in high school to the dramatics club and their activities. She came to Chapel Hill her junior year as the star of "The Dream", and later served as student director of another production.

When I asked what she wanted to do with her history major she explained that she plans to teach in elementary school and "of course, get married."

She likes Salem, charcoal-broiled steaks, and she has a sophomore brother at Duke.

Noel Hollingsworth

If Santa's good to her, Noel Hollingsworth will get a hi-fi set for Christmas. That's what she wants.

She spent her last two years of high school at the Academy where she was chairman of the dance committee and on the annual staff. Her home is in High Point.

A home economics major, Noel, too, plans to teach.

The main difference in the Academy and the College is the social regulation . . . she enjoys being able to date.

You can find her in the science building, working on her knitting, or waiting for Ronnie. She's going to Shoe 'n Slipper at Duke this week-end.

I reached third floor somewhat exhausted and was relieved to learn that my last two subjects were roommates.

Three Plays To Be Given By Academy

Three one-act plays will be presented by Salem Academy in the Academy Social Room Friday, November 9, at 8:30 p.m.

One of the plays is Sunday's Child, an autobiography by Dr. Elizabeth Welch, Professor of Education and Psychology at Salem College. With its setting in Oklahoma, 1916, the story concerns the life of a Methodist minister's daughter.

A second play is Edna Millay's Ario De Capo, a fantasy with the traditional Pierrott and Columbine characters.

The third presentation, Trifles, is a murder mystery by Susan Gaspell.

Leading roles in the three plays are portrayed by Jonne Barney (in Sunday's Child, Joan McLain and Martha Curtiss (in Ario De Capo), and Carolyn Bond and Barbara Biting (in Trifles).

The public is cordially invited. Admission prices are 35c for students and 50c for adults.
