

Poll Of College Students Favors Ike Two-To-One

Davidson, N. C.—Nov. 1—Ten thousand college students in the Carolinas and Virginia favor Eisenhower over Stevenson by two-to-one.

In a poll conducted by 26 college and university newspapers of the three states, the students endorsed the Republican ticket with 59.8 per cent of the total vote. The Democrats trailed with 35.9 per cent.

Results of the poll were announced today by Jim Bratten, editor of the Davidson College Davidsonian, which coordinated the three-state survey.

The States Rights Party polled 2.2% of the vote, the Independent ticket, 1.4%, and other candidates received .5% of the total vote.

North Carolina, usually Democratic, turned to the Eisenhower-Nixon team by 58.5% of the state's popular vote on the collegiate level.

Three N. C. colleges maintained the traditional Democratic majority: Louisburg College, Woman's College of the University of North Carolina, and Presbyterian Junior College. The Independent and States Rights tickets together with all individual candidates polled 1.1% of the total North Carolina vote.

The Republicans led in Virginia with 66.4% of the vote. The Democrats were lower than in either of the other two states. The States Rights element was stronger in Virginia than the combined States Rights, Independent and individual candidates votes in North and South Carolina.

In South Carolina the Republican Party edged out ahead with 50.8% of the state's vote. South Carolina submitted the highest number of Independent votes and no States Rights votes whatever. The Democrats had a higher percentage of votes there than in either of the other two states.

In the women's colleges of the three states, the Democratic and Republican Parties were more evenly matched in number than in the male and co-ed institutions. There were no collegiate woman's votes submitted for the States Rights Party, and very few were entered for individual candidates. Every woman's college except W. C. U. N. C. favored Eisenhower-Nixon.

The male institutions went in every instance for the Republican Party. All other parties and candidates combined totaled only 34.6% of the male vote. These same colleges, however, returned a higher number of States Rights and individual candidate votes than the co-ed and woman's colleges combined.

Although as a body the co-educational colleges supported the Republican Party, one third of them favored Stevenson-Kefauver on the individual college level. The co-ed institutions submitted more votes for the Independent Party than did the men's and women's colleges.

Sidney French Reviews Book To N. C. Group

"Accent on Teaching," a book by Sidney J. French, will be the center of the program next Wednesday when the North Carolina Council of Church Related Colleges meets on Salem campus.

A branch of the North Carolina College Conference meeting at the Robert E. Lee Hotel November 7, 8 and 9, the Council of Church Related Colleges will be welcomed by Dr. Ivy Hixson, a member of the Executive Board.

The group will meet in the living room of Bitting Wednesday and have lunch in the Club Dining Room. Sidney French, of Rawlins College, will speak at the program centering around his book.

A second branch of the N. C. College Conference will be attended by Miss Margaret Simpson, regis-

A word of warning to all petitioners-of-the-future: all petitions whether personal or pertaining to all students on campus should be in the hands of some council member before 4:30 p.m. on Monday. This will enable the council to act on the petition in its regular session.

Otherwise it is very difficult to gather together enough council members to constitute a quorum at called meetings. This is especially true of petitions in which final action comes from the faculty advisory board.

In these cases we can assure you a much speedier answer if you trar. The N. C. Association of Registrars and Officers of Admissions is headed by the registrar of Woman's College, Greensboro. Miss Simpson is secretary-treasurer of the group.

have the petitions in on time.

The majority of the business in the council meetings this week was answering petitions. Several individual petitions came before the council for such things as obtaining extra overnights to attend special church conferences.

Also, freshmen petitioners asked that Friday night, November 2, not be counted as an evening engagement so that many of the members of the class (who are allowed only one evening engagement before midsemester) could attend the various functions included in Wake Forest's Homecoming activities.

The petition was denied as stated, but this allowance was made: freshmen who desire to attend the Friday night function may do so with the knowledge that this event will be charged as one of their evening engagements after midsemesters.

Also in connection with the coming weekend, several upperclassmen petitioned that late permission be granted for Friday and Saturday nights. The terms of the petition, which stated no specific time, were granted.

Watch for announcement in regard to time, and please don't forget the procedure for obtaining late permission.

"Sis" Bridgers

Another home economics major is Sis Bridgers from Wilson. But Sis isn't going to teach.

She comes from National Cathedral in Washington, D. C. where she was chief cheerleader and on the newspaper staff.

Sis places strawberry ice cream high on her list of favorites, baby blue, water skiing, football (for boys), "Bootie", and Carolina.

And this girl likes Elvis . . .
