Ann Catlette was sipping a coke in Harry's when a young man wearing a white tee shirt, blue jeans, and windbreaker came up to her booth and began talking. He gave her a magazine and told her to deliver it to a girl who should be a junior at Salem, and left as quickly as he had come.

Ann looked down at the magazine cover on which was the young man's picture.—or was it he—wasn't it James Dean? The picture and the young man were Brian Mintz, who is now a construction worker in Akron, Ohio.

Brian is a dead ringer for the late James Dean. An article on page 24 of the magazine stated that he is now taking dramatic coaching and hopes to make something of the resemblance.

Ann ran out to stop him, but he was gone.

Madiera Ends Civic Music

Jean Madiera, brilliant young contralto, of the New York Metropolitan Opera Company will give a concert Friday night, April 12, as the final Winston-Salem Civic Music Association's presentation for this year.

Born in Illinois, she began her career in music by studying piano. She did not take up voice until she was grown. A friend of hers in New York suggested to her that she take voice lessons which she did, entering the Julliard School of Music. There she met her husband, Francis, who will be her accompanist Friday night, taking time off from his own job of conducting the Rhode Island Philharmonic Orchestra.

Jean Madiera was a success overnight in the role of Carmen at the Vienna State Opera where she took forty-five curtain calls opening night. In the same role at the New York Metropolitan, she took twenty-five curtain calls.

On the program which she will give here Friday night, she will sing some numbers from Carmen among others.

 4. Each junior was asked to sign a preference sheet stating for which of the offices they would like to be considered. Each of the girls who indicated an interest was discussed and given a chance. They were not always nominated, but they were considered. 5 Finally, the committee discusses each candidate very frankly and very carefully. In any open nomination the discussion could never be so frank.
