

... And Nothing Was Heard But The Roar Of The Bus

The bus driver went to the basement of Clewell, and going back to the bus he dragged the heavy boxes onto each of the two buses that were bound for Davidson College. The buses warmed up and there were several screams of "Wait for my roomie" and "Don't leave, here I am!"

Finally, on our way, I slid down in my seat, tucked my heavy coat under my face, I closed my eyes with the idea of sneaking a short snooze. Just as I was dozing off, Mary Jane yelled, "Anybody want to sing?"

"Yea," came a chorus of voices. So, I tried to sleep to the strains of "Gimme that Old-time Religion", "Do Lord" and other traveling music.

The lunches that Mrs. Cummings had packed included two sandwiches, a pickle, a piece of chicken, two cookies, and an apple. Nobody wanted to stop for drinks since it was already 12:30. The girls were supposed to be there before 2:00, so Mary Jane and I pushed dry bread and cookies down dry throats and washed both down with chunks of juicy apple.

The bus ride seemed very short. However, I had never been to Davidson, so I could not judge by comparison. Driving up the hard, clay, gravelled road, the freshmen began to squirm and turned frowning faces toward their comrades. "If that's my date, I can't bear it," or "Golly, I hope that one over there is my date, he's just darling!" was heard.

Bounding off the bus, the girls walked by dozens of beanie-topped freshmen, a few unifor medmusicians, and some upper-classmen into the guest house, where they were given name tags with their dates' name on the back. Then the girls stood on the steps as Bob McCrae called their dates.

The game had already begun when everyone finally got paired off, and Mary Jane and I were just about the last of the group to arrive at the stadium. Davidson really looked as if they'd win for awhile, but in the late part of the third quarter it was fairly evident that a come-back could hardly be expected. During the fourth quarter the freshmen provided some excitement when they crowded down the stadium steps into the field and tried to take the Citadel cannon. Cadets rushed on the field after them, a blue sea in uniforms.

After the game, everyone went up to the College Union where music was provided by a Negro pianist and two student musicians. Some people left the dance to visit the fraternity houses of their dates, but around 7:00 everyone scattered and had dinner.

At 9:00 a dance was begun for all students. This dance really got interesting to most of the Salem girls after 10:00. Converse girls had to leave at 10:00, but the lucky Salemites were allowed late permission.

When everyone gathered at the bus at 11:45 many "good-byes" were heard; some of them were relieved ones, but most of them were hesitant ones. The roll was called and everyone was accounted for. The buses roared and cries of "Mary Jane, let's come back again," and "Can't you plan another of these real soon?" were heard. For a while girls wandered about exchanging descriptions of their dates, their afternoons and their evenings. Hushed voices were heard, then creaking of the seats, then nothing but the drone of the bus.

Around . . .

Freshmen are still learning—

Becky Shell and Frances Smith learned that food was prohibited in the library when Mrs. Pyron discovered them in the middle of a small picnic, complete with ice cream and cookies, in the main reading room one night last week.

Jette Seear is still outrating us all—

A Wake Forest student has asked her for a date every Saturday night from now until June.

Salemites are still getting pinned.

Annual Staff Labors For Press Date

This year's annual is expected to be better than ever. Many new ideas and changes will be seen in the Sights and Insights when it makes its appearance next spring. The staff is working hard each day trying to meet Christmas deadlines, and they want to student body to know how much they appreciate your co-operation this far.

Nollner Morrisett, business manager, has appointed class representatives who will be in charge of selling ads for that particular class. They are as follows: Kay Kirkpatrick, Freshman class; Betsy Gatling, Sophomore class; Mary Jane Mayhew, Junior class; Mary Gladys Rogers, Senior class. It will be interesting to see which class sells the most ads. It is the hope of the business staff that more ads will be sold this year than last. At the present moment, the sale of ads stands far above last year's sale at this same time. Let's keep up the good work.

Sandy Shaver is in charge of distributing the proofs and taking orders. She will be notifying the students each day as to the details concerning the proofs and orders. The students are asked to watch the bulletin board in the dining room carefully for any notices concerning the proofs.

Class pictures this year are made by Jerome W. Golden Studios, located in New York. It is the hope of the staff that each girl will be pleased with her pictures and will want to buy them, possibly for birthday presents or Christmas presents. This is an opportunity which no girl can miss. Order your pictures soon, and get them early.
