Evaluation Of Faculty

On Monday afternoon of this week, I attended a Salem Student gested in which Salemites might Council meeting for the first time. It is not unlike many other meetings held on campus. The girls gathered slowly, laughing and talking about the past week-end or the one to come. They smoked and drank orange juice. Some sat on the floor during the meeting. Yet there was one important difference -vour representatives to the Council showed a sense of responsibility that made them give their full attention to the problems presented to them. There was no chatter or whispering. President Mary Curtis Wrike called for order only at the beginning of the meeting.

The first item discussed by the Council was the regional conference of the National Student Association, to be held at State College, December 12, 13, and 14. Sally Boyard, NSA coordinator, will pro-306 bably be the official delegate from Salem. The Council hopes to send a delegation of at least four or five members. It is important that the small girls' college have a part in shaping the policy of the NSA.

The second item discussed at the meeting was the problem of unapproved sign-out cards. The Council decided that unapproved signout cards will be treated in the same manner as failure to sign out. Students are reminded that there is no excuse for leaving an unapproved card on the desk in the Dean's office, since there is always a Dean on duty during office hours and one on call at all times. During the remainder of the meeting, the Council discussed the Salem students' lack of influence on the academic policies of the school. The council members feel that there is some dissatisfaction with the instruction and content of some of the courses taught. They also think that students should feel responsibility in working for improvement in academic areas.

The three ways that were sugwork for improvement were: having students serve on faculty committees such as the calendar committee or the committee on class attendance, having students suggest curriculum changes, and continuing the study of faculty evaluation.

As far as student membership on faculty committees is concerned, Mary Curtis personally did not feel that it would be wise, and the other council members seemed to agree with her. The only student opinion that would be valuable would be a representative one, and it would be rather difficult for one or two students on a faculty committee to be sensitive to the opinion of the whole student body.

Some action will be taken on having students suggest curriculum changes. Mary Curtis will discuss with Dr. Hixson the possibility of having professors request their majors to suggest changes in their field's program.

The Student Council voted to continue the study of faculty evaluation, as council members felt that this was perhaps the best way they could improve their classes. Martha Duvall, chairman of the faculty evaluation committee, reported that last spring the faculty felt that evaluation would be good if it were handled on an individual basis. The faculty had requested that a questionnaire be drawn up and brought to a faculty meeting for approval. Each faculty member was then to have his students fill out the questionnaire and return it directly to him.

Before Martha's committee can begin work along these lines suggested by the faculty last spring, she must have volunteers to fill the places of those committee members who did not return to Salem this year. See her; talk to her; and, if you don't want to volunteer for the committee, at least let her know what you think. This is important!
