

Jane Poses For Drexyl Furniture Ad

The March issues of "McCalls" and "House and Gardens" magazines will run two-page ads of Drexyl furniture featuring Jane Bridges.

In an interview with "Potts", she said that a representative from Alderman photographers had seen her in the Miss Winston-Salem contest last year and had called for a photo test. Jane went to High Point, had pictures made and a client of the company asked her to model for them.

The March advertisement will show Jane pushing a Drexyl tea cart.

Beverly Wollney has done some work along with Jane for Chatham blankets. The two girls modeled in one of their shows and were given free Chatham blankets.

Jane Bridges and Beverly Wollney both did some modeling before coming to Salem. Jane received experience in Philadelphia. Beverly does occasional work in New York.

Wesley Group Has Party

An informal Christmas party was the theme of the Wesley Foundation meeting Thursday night December 12, 1957 in the Club Dining Room. The meeting was opened with a short devotion; then, everyone took part in making Christmas wreaths and singing Christmas carols. Hot chocolate with marshmallows and doughnuts were served. The next Wesley Foundation meeting will be held January 9, 1959.

Three Elected For Final Student Teacher Contest

In their meeting Tuesday night, the F. T. A. elected three finalists for the "Miss Student Teacher" contest. The nominees are Anis Ira, Martha Jarvis, and Mary Curtis Wrike. This year, the three finalists will compete for the title in Chapel. In January, they will present their philosophy of education and speak briefly on their interests in the teaching profession and their ideas. The judges will be present at the Chapel and will make the final selection. They will also have the opportunity of asking the girls questions. The judging committee will consist of certain faculty members and representatives from the public school system.

This method of selecting the three finalists and the presentation of their philosophies is slightly different from that previously followed. In the past, the F. T. A. has proposed five qualified girls and submitted them to the student body for vote. The three highest then went on to the final judging, and appeared before the committee. They have never had this final judging in Chapel before. It was felt that the student body was not as qualified as the F. T. A. to select the three finalists, and that there was some danger that this selection might turn into a popularity contest since all of the underclassmen did not know all of the nominees; so the change was adopted.

All three of the finalists finished their practice teaching in November, and their records were satisfactory to the screening committee which proposed their's and five other names to the F. T. A. for a vote. Anis did her student teaching in the third grade at Wiley School. Martha is the only secondary teacher; she did her student teaching in speech and English at Reynolds High. Mary Curtis was also at Wiley; she was teaching in the second grade.

Harry ...

day many years ago. But Harry has his little surprises, too. He dotes on buying Betsy presents.

So, day in and day out "Harry's Hideaway" opens its doors to all of us. We enter, scream orders, flop down on the bench, and gossip, dream, gripe, laugh, scream, or do just whatever enters our uninhibited minds. The artistically inclined Salemite is invited to display her prowess with the brush by drawing seasonal murals on the mirrors, while the dancer is welcome to drop a dime in the juke box and go, man goooooo.

Science

Perhaps the Russian Sputnik has shaken the world and sent a few citizens toward hysteria. It is well that they are finally shaken, though it be by a military weapon, to the part science plays in the modern world. The liberal arts of our time cannot be liberal if they reject or disdain science and technology.

At their Council meeting on Wednesday night, the A. A. elected four new positions. The two freshmen members of the council were received. They are Jackie Reeves of Greenville, South Carolina, and Carolyn McLeod of Elon, North Carolina. Gray Duncan was chosen to head outing and horseback riding, and Henrietta Jennings was chosen to head ping pong and archery.
