

Collegiate Who's Who For 1958-59 Announced

Committee Chooses Six Seniors, Campus Leaders

Six seniors active in campus affairs have been chosen to represent Salem in the 1958-59 edition of Who's Who in American Colleges and Universities. They are Ann Brinson, from Coral Gables, Florida; Frankie Cunningham of Winston-Salem; Margaret MacQueen of Clinton; Marilyn Shull of Chevy Chase, Maryland; Jean Smitherman of Elkin; and Marcellie Van Liere of High Point.

The girls were nominated on the basis of qualities set up by the National Committee, whose offices are in Tuscaloosa, Alabama. The following areas were considered:

1. The student's excellence and sincerity in scholarship.
2. The student's leadership and participation in extra-curricular and academic activities.
3. The student's citizenship and service to the school.
4. The student's promise of future usefulness to business and society.

Ann Brinson, a mathematics major, has been most active in Student Government. A Dean's List student, she served as Treasurer of the Stee Gee Association last year, and presently she is heading the Judicial Board Planning Committee.

An Oslo scholar last year, Frankie Cunningham divides her time between activities associated with her music major with Student Government. As vice-president of the student body, she serves as Chairman of the Chapel Committee and of the Presidents' Forum.

Student Government is also the area of greatest activity for Margaret MacQueen. Before becoming president of the Association last year, Margaret, a language major, served on the WRA Council.

Marilyn Shull, a piano major, has divided her time between organizational activities of the music students, the Stee Gee Association and the Pierrettes.

The current editor of the Salemite, Jean Smitherman, is an English major. Her second major area of activity is the Pierrettes, campus dramatics group.

Marcille Van Liere, a home economics major, also comes from the area of publications. This year she edits the Sights and Insights. She has also worked with the pierrettes and in Student Government.

The Salem College Who's Who Committee was composed of Dr. Gramley, Dr. Hixon, and Dean Heidbreder of the administration, Dean Sandresky of the School of Music, Miss Margaret MacQueen representing the students, and Dr. William White, Miss Mozelle Palmer, and Dr. Inzer Byers from the faculty at large.

Outstanding Poet Will Visit Salem

The poetry and prose writings of Reed Whittemore, who will be a campus visitor at Salem College on November 10th, are earning for him a reputation as one of America's outstanding contemporary literary figures.

Two books of poetry have been published by Mr. Whittemore. They are "Heroes and Heroines" (Reginald and Hitchcock, 1946) and "An American Takes a Walk" (University of Minnesota Press, 1956). His poems have appeared in the New Yorker, New Republic, Nation, Seawanee Review, Kenyan Review, Poetry, Furioso, Chicago Review, New Orleans Poetry Review, Saturday Review of Literature, Yale Review, and the Virginia Quarterly Review.

In 1957 a series of six of his essays were published in the New Republic, and he has also contributed to Esquire. He was one of the founders of the "little magazine," Furioso, published by Mr. Whittemore from 1946 to 1953.

Mr. Whittemore was born in New Haven, Conn., in 1919, was educated at Andover and Yale, and did graduate work for a year at Princeton. During World War II he served four years in the Mediterranean Theater as a captain in the U. S. Air Force. He has taught during summers at the Universities of Iowa and Minnesota, and since 1947 has been on the Faculty of Carlton College in Minnesota where he is Associate Professor of English. In 1957 he conducted the Writer's Conference at the University of Indiana.

The humorous, satirical vein of Mr. Whittemore's poems is distinctly pointed up by James Dickey in his review of "An American Takes a Walk" for Poetry Magazine. He says: "As a poet with certain obvious and amusing gifts, Reed Whittemore is almost everyone's favorite . . . The subjects of the world stand around you, during your reading of Whittemore's poems, revealed in their inconsequently, ridiculous, very recognizable and humorously contemptible attitudes, and never in their most deeply characteristic and unknown gestures, in unmanageable love."

For Mr. Whittemore's visit here, which is being made under the auspices of the Arts Program, Association of American Colleges, a program of stimulating activities has been planned. He will speak to the student body in chapel Monday, November 10th. From 4 o'clock until 5 o'clock he will be in the Day Student Center. Coffee will then be served. Mr. Whittemore will be in some of the classes all day Monday and part of Tuesday.

Local Artists Display Varied Talents

Oil Paintings Show Freedom In Art Form

The music students have relinquished their privilege of being the most frequent viewers of Salem's art exhibits to the faculty whose offices are located on first floor Main Hall. The privilege will also be the students'. On the brick wall opposite and adjoining the steps to second floor, hang oil paintings by "Four Experimental Artists". The exhibit includes along with the paintings information about the artists, their written Manifesto, and a brief history of Expressionism. It comes to Salem through the Art Department at Davidson and features the work of Judy Joy, Richard Carlyon, Eleanor Rufty and James Bumgardner. James Bumgardner attended Salem and is a native of Winston-Salem. All four artists are young, in their twenty's or thirty's, and now live in Richmond, Virginia.

Expressionism, the characteristic element in these paintings, is best understood by the last two sentences of the artists' Manifesto. It reads: "The essential fact about each one of us is our constant, incessant, and active concern with art . . . A celebration of unrestrained freedom . . . An assertion of Life. It is terrible, it is rightening, it is beautiful". Understanding that the artists' purpose to express himself should help the passing critic who judges at first glance.

The methods used by the four experimental artists vary. Rufty's "Nuns in an April Forest" and Carlyon's "Legend of the Field" are subjective approaches to the subject. The hazy figures in these paintings do not contrast sharply with the background. They blend into the background, giving a feeling of continual movement. Bumgardner's "Portrait of Judy" is an example of Expressionism. The colors he used are raw, unconventional. The contours are harsh, irregular, and the figure is abruptly separated from the background. Carlyon's "Sketchbook Quartet" is similar to "Portrait of Judy" in technique; Joy's "Young Portrait" combines expressionism with cubism for an unusual effect. A flat, two-dimensional plane is characteristic of all the paintings.

Rufty, Bumgardner, Joy, and Carlyon represent emerging American artists striving for independence from European traditions. Their paintings are worth a second glance, and a second thought.

Arts Council To Present Showcase

The Arts Council of Winston-Salem is putting on the Arts Showcase November 13-15. Those taking part in the showcase productions for these three days are the Dance Forum, The Little Theatre, and the Salem-Symphony Trio.

The Dance Forum will present the ballet "Pas d'Ecole" and the Little Theatre, the play "Dark Lady of the Sonnets" by George Bernard Shaw. The program sponsored by the Salem Symphony Trio will include an original work commissioned for the Showcase by Mrs. Margaret V. Sandresky, a program of seven Spanish songs by Mrs. Joan Jacobowsky, and a performance of the theme and variations from the "Trio in B Flat Major" by Beethoven.

Those desiring tickets to the Showcase may purchase them for a dollar at the Arts Center, 610 Coliseum Drive.

The Arts Council is a council of the art organizations in the community and is dedicated to promoting, financing, and advising these various organizations.

The Arts Council Showcase, given in celebration of the opening of the recently completed Art Center, is being presented mainly to thank the community members for help in the building of this new center.

Photograms Exhibited In Main Hall

As a part of Salem's new Graphic Art course, Susan McIntyre and Elizabeth Smith have recently completed a display of photograms. They are now being exhibited at the southeast end of Main Hall. These photograms are a study in design.

The photograms were done in the darkroom of the Science Building under the supervision of Mr. Britt (What will he be doing next!) He explained the developing process to the girls so that they could do the actual work themselves.

Susan and Elizabeth used bits of colored plastic, leaves, and even test tubes, watches and rings to form the various shapes they wanted for their design. Since all of the work had to be done in complete darkness, the design had to be thought out ahead of time. The girls experimented with single, double, and triple exposures, finding that the double exposures gave the best results in contrast and shades of grey.
