

Salem Will Miss Gentry And Paine Next Year As They Fill New Positions

A voice from behind insisting "Turn, turn, turn, turn, turn—A mass of black hair and two enormous brown eyes asking why you turned the mirror instead of making it to the other end of the room . . .

Round backs hunched beneath round umbrellas clustered by the lily pond—the only straight lines in view are those of the rain falling both on those going to and from breakfast and on Mr. Paine's sophomore lit. class . . .

These are two scenes which charmed Salemites. They are likely to add sparkle to the phrase: "Good luck next year," which students will soon be extending to Miss June Gentry, dance instructor, and Mr. Stephen Paine, instructor in English.

Miss Gentry will be teaching at Mary Washington College in Fredericksburg, Virginia next winter. The Woman's division of the University of Virginia, Mary Washington has an enrollment of about 1500 students. Miss Gentry is excited about the prospect of teaching only dance and of having classes on all levels. She is looking forward, too, to studying again; she hopes to find a teacher in Washington, D. C., which is only an hour's drive from Fredericksburg.

Happy with her experience here at Salem, she feels she was "lucky in getting good dancers, people who were interested," and hopes "modern dance has gotten a good start at Salem."

Mr. Paine is going to Duke next fall to complete work on his Ph. D. He came to Salem two years ago after three years at Duke, where he worked simultaneously on his Master's degree and his Ph. D. He has completed all the requirements for his degree except the writing of his dissertation, which is on the American author Edward Eggleston.

Mr. Paine will be on leave of absence and says he plans to return to Salem unless "Yale decides they want someone in their graduate program," which, he added, "is rather unlikely."

Office Will Handle Trunk Arrangements

Students wishing to ship trunks or boxes by express should make arrangements for pickup service through the Office of the Dean of Students. Contact either Bright or one of the office personnel, and men employed by the college will pick up the items to be shipped. This new procedure will eliminate confusion caused when girls make separate arrangements. Do not call Mr. Yarborough or any of his staff except through the office.
