

The Salemite

Volume XLV

Salem College, Winston-Salem, N. C., Friday, January 17, 1964

Number 1

Taylor Typifies Young Teacher

Elaine Taylor, English major from Aulander, was selected "Miss Student Teacher of Salem College," on Tuesday, January 14. She will represent Salem at the North Carolina Student Teacher Convention in March. Active on the Salem campus, Elaine is President of Bitting Dormitory, Chairman of Community Services for the YWCA, Judicial Board representative, and movie chairman of SNEA.

The "Miss Student Teacher" candidates are selected from the first semester student teachers who are rated by the education department. Six candidates are chosen to speak to the SNEA which chooses three finalists. This year the finalists were Pat Ashby, Jo Dunbar, and Elaine Taylor.

In assembly Tuesday each girl gave a three minute speech which expressed her theory of education. Following each talk, judges from the Winston-Salem school system

January graduates display their newly acquired sophistication as Carolyn Tyson, Sandy Smith, Mary Lawrence Pond, Claudia Crawford and Betsy Johnson slide in the snow.

Gramley States Fine Arts Fund Tops Set Total

During December and the beginning of January new donations to the Twentieth Decade Fund brought the total to approximately $1,725,000. The budget for the Fine Arts Center was originally set at $1,700,000, so the funds now appear to be ample, according to Dr. Dale Gramley, president.

Members of the Executive Committee of the Board of Trustees will meet at 2 p.m. January 29 to receive bids on parking areas, access roads, walkways, and other construction necessary to the preparation of the Fine Arts Building.

Dr. Gramley also revealed that the Trustees authorized the preparation of plans for a new dormitory. After completion of the plans, the Trustees will decide whether to go ahead with construction. If the plans and the building itself are approved by the Board, Pfohl House will be demolished and the new dormitory built behind its present site, 75 feet from Church Street and perpendicular to Babcock Dormitory.

Dr. Gramley stressed his hope for the approval of the dormitory, adding that the 85 to 90 girls which it could accommodate would call for an enlargement of present faculty 7 to 9 members, thus holding the current ratio of faculty to students of 11 to 1.

Ten Seniors Graduate This Month; Plan Marriage, Jobs For Future

Ten out of 1964's ninety-three seniors will graduate this month. However, many of the girls will return in the spring to receive their diplomas with their class on May 31.

Among these girls are Kitty Bundy, a biology major from Mountain City, Tennessee, who plans to do hospital work upon graduation; Claudia Crawford from Salisbury, a mathematics major who is planning to work at the Research Triangle in Chapel Hill or Durham; and Betsy Johnson, a mathematics major from Dunn who is presently making marriage plans.

Also graduating in another week are day student Becky Newsome, a history major; Mary Lawrence Pond, an art history major from Suffolk, Virginia, both of whom are also planning marriage; and Dotty Pooser, an English major from Marion, North Carolina.

Aurelia Roginson from Danville, Virginia, and a French major is also getting married. Sandra Smith, a history major from Mullins, South Carolina will graduate at the end of this semester.

Carolyn Tyson, an English major from High Point and Josephine Vance, a day student religion major who is planning marriage, conclude this list.

All of these girls have been at Salem for their college years. They are now in the midst of comprehensive examinations as well as semester examinations.

Girls Attend State Legislature; Salem Sends Four Delegates

The State Student Legislature will be held in Raleigh, February 27-29. This organization, made up of colleges and universities from the entire state, forms a legislature through which it passes bills submitted by various colleges.

These bills can be of state or national interest and the best ones passed may be submitted to the appropriate members of the North Carolina General Assembly for possible consideration. In this way North Carolina students have a chance to actually pass laws in North Carolina.

Salem's delegates are Ann Marie Martin, Brandy Hughes, Mary Dameron, and Jean King, two of whom will be in the Senate while the other two are in the House. Robbin Causey and Wendy McGinn are the alternates. Attending the legislature as observers are Barbara Jean Spetnagel, Carson McKnight, Jane Frost, Susan Storey, Ann McMaster, Anna White, Nancy Smith, Beth Rose, Judy Campbell, Margy Harris, Peggy Booker, Elinor Trexler, Zena Strub, Dinah Daniel, and Margaret Bourdeaux.

These people compose a committee tee which is now writing a bill, which Salem hopes to submit, concerning supplements for academic teachers.

Wendt Heads Committee For Crime Investigation

Because of the 28 murders in Winston-Salem in 1963, the Forsyth Ministers Fellowship set up a Crime Study Committee composed of 12 members, including Robert Wendt, chairman.

Mr. Wendt, who has been supplying St. Andrews Presbyterian Church in Stanleyville since last August, was chosen as chairman because of his interest in sociology, his experience in teaching at the Police Academy, and his close work with the Police Department. As chairman, he is to organize the committee and to find the causes of the murder rate.

The decision to form the committee came from the director of the Committee for a Model Community who asked the ministers to do something to alleviate the increasing numbers of murders.

The purpose of the committee is to study the current murder record in Forsyth County and to see what, if anything, the Ministers Fellowship can do to reduce the murder rate. However, the causes of the murders must be found before suggestions are made.

Professor Robert L. Wendt studies crime reports in preparation for his committee of ministers to investigate murder in Winston-Salem.

Honor Chapel Taps Scholars

Honors Assembly for first semester work will be held January 30. Speaking will be Dr. J. A. Bryant, Jr., head of the English Department of the University of North Carolina at Greensboro.

Honored will be those who achieved the Dean's List and those juniors and seniors who will be inducted into the Honor Society.

Elaine Taylor spoke to Tuesday's assembly on her philosophy of education. She was chosen to represent Salem as Miss Student Teacher.

and the Salem College faculty had the opportunity to ask questions.

Elaine's educational philosophy included motivation of the child, consideration of the individual differences of each child, and an attempt to educate the "total child." Elaine did her student teaching in the third grade at Oak Summit School. After graduation she plans to resume teaching, but she has not decided where.

Symposium To Begin April 16; Program Includes Speakers, Music

Salem's symposium, entitled "Communication through the Arts in the Twentieth Century," will begin at the assembly hour on April 16 and continue through April 18. According to Dr. Inzer Byers, Chairman of the Steering and Format Committee, plans are being made to secure three speakers, one each to represent art, drama, and music. It is hoped that the symposium weekend will contain an art exhibit, a theatrical production, and a musical program. In addition, discussion sessions for faculty and students are planned.

The Steering Committee, headed by Dr. Byers, also numbers William Mangum, Miss Barbara Battle, Frances Bailey, Betty Bullard, and Lucy McCallum. The symposium sub-committees are as follows: Book List and Preliminary Briefing—Marty Richmond, chairman; Dr. Mary Hill, Margaret Persons, Louisa Wilson; Discussion Groups—Anne Kendrick, chairman; Michael Lewis, Richard Bloesh, Dale Eyerly; Entertainment—Ellen Hefflin, chairman; Miss Jess Byrd, Dottie Girling; Finance—Tish Johnston, chairman; James Bray; Physical Arrangements—Jack White, chairman; Paul Peterson, Pat Wilson; Publicity—Anne Romig, chairman; B. Carson French, Olivia Sowers, and Robbin Causey.