tinue to involve more people—as many as possible.

The President must keep Student Government running effectively and efficiently. With her board, she decides how this can best be done.

Representing the junior class as their president, I have served on Legislative Board this year. Last year I was hall president.

Ellen Heflin

Student Government has an excellent opportunity in the following year to widen the opportunities for greater student participation and responsibility. To do this, I am in favor of a continuation of such actions as the recently enacted removal of the "F" system and the addition of two extra overnights for freshmen. I would also urge a re-evaluation of the present classification system and revision of the freshman evening engagement regulation.

The Executive Board should act as a coordinator to communicate between the Legislative and Judicial Boards; I would like to see the Executive Board as a meeting ground for problems which arise in Legislative and Judicial matters. Communication between the faculty, administration, and students should be strengthened. The faculty should be informed of student opinion concerning academic affairs, as should students of faculty viewpoints.

The President of Student Government can exercise an important function in reflecting student and faculty opinion to the Legislative Board. The President should be available at specific times to hear suggestions and opinions from students and faculty concerning the work of Student Government.

Student Government is only as strong as each student makes it through her interest, cooperation, and enthusiasm in the various activities. Through a more effective means of communication and student interest, campus life and our Student Government as a whole can benefit.

As a freshman, I served as treasurer of the class. During my sophomore year, I was house president of Clewell Dorm, and this year I have served as Secretary of the Judicial Board and as a member of the Executive Board. I have also worked with faculty and students as a member of the Symposium Committee.

Wendy McGlenn

As a candidate for the office of President of Student Government, I would particularly like to see more students become interested and active in Student Government and campus organizations. In order to accomplish this I would first, encourage students to attend Legislative Board as observers. Second, I would investigate the possibility of having students serve on some faculty committees, for instance the Calendar and Class Attendance Committees. Third, I would like to establish a program to draw more students, particularly freshmen into organizations second semester when they have determined how much time they can devote to extra-curricular activities. Fourth, I believe that more students should be holding responsible positions and would recommend an evaluation of the point system to determine whether it permits a maximum number of students to hold office.

Finally, I would like to see more students attend conferences such as State Student Legislature, FOCUS, and NSA Regionals. I would encourage increased communication with other colleges with the possibility of establishing a program for exchanging student representatives for several days to study the methods of other student governments. These and other programs would, I hope, stimulate activity on campus and interest in the world "beyond the square".

I have served on various committees established by Legislative Board as a delegate to both National and Regional NSA Conferences. I am President of Humanities and program chairman of IRC.

Moore, Local Artist, Will Illustrate Christian Events In Great Paintings

Susan Moore will give a special lecture at 7:30 p.m. on March 7 at Home Moravian Church. Miss Moore, who lives at 780 Arbor Road, is a local artist and teacher and will help people in their observance of Holy Week by discussing the events of the life of Christ as depicted in great painting.

Beginning with the fourteenth century, the works shown will be predominantly from Italian, German, and Flemish schools and by such artists as Giotto, La Vide, and Bosch. Miss Moore will also include a few slides and illustrations of modern religious paintings. The themes are mainly the Crucifixion and the Resurrection. In the course of the lecture, during which about forty slides will be shown, Miss Moore will show the contribution each of these great masterpieces had made to religious thought from the point of Christian witness. The lecture is also designed to show the heritage of Western art as revealed in these masterpieces.

Kirkland Visits Annual Meeting In New Orleans

Miss Edith Kirkland spent February 24-27 in New Orleans at a conference of school masters, principals, and admission directors of colleges and universities. She represented the Admissions Department of Salem College at the annual nation-wide conference. The convention served as coordinator between high schools and colleges. The principals and admission heads were able to discuss problems and new ideas involved in the transfer of students from high school to college.

The featured speaker of the three day convention was Douglas Carter of Winston-Salem. He spoke about the Governor's School held here. Last summer he headed the Governor's School and will serve on the direction staff again this year. Mr. Carter is in charge of special services to the Winston-Salem Education System.

Betty Clark Gray, who was recently accepted at Bowman Gray as a lab technician student, is at work in the science building.

Med Technology Division Accepts Betty Clark Gray

A junior from Richmond, Virginia, Betty Clark Gray will begin her year's study for a degree in medical technology this summer. On June 9, she will move to the Kembly Inn where she will live with around twenty other students under the same program. Although she will receive her BS degree from Salem, she will take courses at only the Baptist Hospital this coming year.

Betty Clark has devoted many of her summers to hospital work. For two summers she worked at the Medical College of Virginia where she ran the playroom on the children's floor. This past summer, she worked in occupational therapy at this same hospital.

She is presently considering work in Richmond after she is graduated.

ATTENTION

Students are reminded that this Monday is the day on which the oral Sabine polio vaccine will be administered in the gymnasium. Permission from parents of students is necessary before the vaccine can be given.

History Society To Induct Bullard, Mallard, Tuesday

Phi Alpha Theta, national honorary history society, will induct two members on Tuesday, March 3 in Strong Friendship Room. The new members are Betty Bullard and Barbara Mallard.

Requirements for membership are twelve hours of history with a B plus average and an overall B average. The induction, which will begin at 5:15 p.m., will be followed by a dinner meeting.

Betty Bullard is a senior from Belmont. An English major and history minor, she is also in elementary education. On the Archway and Salemite staffs, Betty is active as program chairman of Humanities. She also serves on the Steering Committee of the symposium and the Pierot Award Committee.

Sophomore Barbara Mallard is from New Bern. A history major and an English minor. She will get a certificate in secondary education. Barbara is on the Publicity Committee of the IRC.

The other active members of Phi Alpha Theta are Nancy Knott, president; Frances Bailey, Wendy McGlenn, Tish Johnston, Alice Reid, Dr. Lucy Austin, Dr. Inzer Byers, Errol M. Clauss, Dean Amy Heidbreder, Dean Ivy Hixson, and Hewson Michie.

Barbara Mallard and Betty Bullard, newly elected members of Phi Alpha Theta, look over the day's news together in the library.
