Editor Of Salemite Leaves Fine Example For Paper

By Mary Dameron

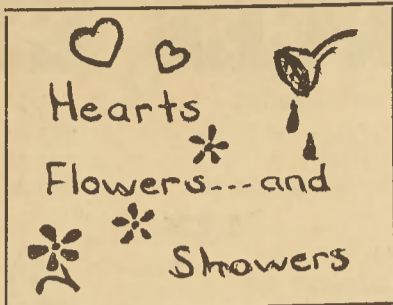

"No Excuses!" boarded in gay flowers and posted on the door of The Salemite office—this message revealed two things about the outgoing Salemite editor, Robbin Causey. She made sure not only that her staff met the deadlines, but also that they had fun doing the work. Even at the Sun Printing Company Robbin's insistence that there was just one more comma fault to be corrected was often the closing words of the day.

This was a year of change for The Salemite. Because of Salem's academic changes, the new Thursday deadline for the paper often meant that preparation for seventy-five minute classes had to be sacrificed. Problems grew from few to many every week. What happens when no typists or proof readers appear on Monday nights? Then the withdrawal of cigarette ads meant more empty space to be filled—usually by Robbin on Tuesday around 12:30 a.m.

But Robbin saw that the work was done, and done well. In the process she left much evidence of her late hours and concern for her job: consistently stimulating editorials, replaced light bulbs in the Salemite office, and piles of chipped fingernail polish underneath her desk.

An English and history major from Greensboro, N. C., Robbin plans to teach high school upon graduation. She will marry Dallas Clark on June 26—and maybe raise a few little editors.

Freshman Betsy Barnes accepted the pin of Bill Bingham from Andrew College, and Liza Via plans to marry Wesley Bonds, who will graduate from Tulane in June. Cheri Rose completes the freshman inventory by announcing her plans for an August wedding with Tommy Davis, a 1965 candidate for graduation at Carolina.

The junior register increased percentage-wise after the engagements of Pam Baker and Jan Crawley. Pam has chosen the month of September to wed Neill Clark, the Director of the Community Theater in Hickory, and Jan too has selected September for her wedding with Freddie Mills of Shelby, a student at Wake Forest.

September's popularity is further evidenced by Charlotte Carter's decision to marry Bob Rice then, and Susan Leigh is anticipating both her June 25 marriage to Toby Maddox, a law student at Wake Forest, and the prospect of honeymooning in New Mexico. Wendy McGlinn has also exchanged Ted Lockwood's pin for "crystallized carbon."

While all these girls have been talking about what they will do, Cecie Boren's done it! She married Bill James in March.
