Classes Elect Experienced Leaders For Service In Forthcoming Year

Election month at Salem College is not November, but March. The results of the balloting have been tabulated, and experienced class leaders for 1965-66 have been chosen.

The officers of the rising senior class include Susie Materne, president; Linda Tunstall, vice-president; Jeannie Barnes, secretary; and Marilyn Ward, treasurer. Susie, who lives in Richmond, Virginia, served as president of South Dormitory her junior year. The vice-presidency will be in the capable hands of Linda Tunstall of High Point, North Carolina, who served as vice-president of her junior class. A marshal her junior year, Jeannie Barnes is from Charlottesville, Virginia. A representative to IRS and YWCA this year, Marilyn Ward from Rocky Mount, North Carolina will turn her attention to the treasury her senior year. All of these girls live in South.

Ann Richert, incoming president of the rising junior class, will perform her duties with a smile, contrary to the fierce front she presented to the freshmen as FITS chairman this year. Ann is a native of Raleigh, North Carolina. Experience is the word for Betsy Carr of Wilson, N. C., for she will serve her second term as vice-president of her class. Susan Kelly, who served as class treasurer this year, was elected secretary for '65-'66. Susan lives in Conover, North Carolina. Dabney Kelley will be the custodian of the junior class funds. Dabney, who lives in Charlotte, North Carolina, was president of her sophomore class.

Election day was quite a victory for Clewell Dormitory, for all four sophomore officers reside there.

Donna Van Dyke, who proved her leadership as chairman of the entertainment committee for Parents' Day, will serve as president of the rising sophomore class. Donna lives in Richmond, Virginia. Martha Eubanks, who lives in Monroe, North Carolina, is the new vice-president. Martha was elected president of her freshman class. Brett Miller, from Raleigh, North Carolina, was a representative to IRS this year and is the new class secretary. The class funds will be entrusted to Priscilla Taylor in '65-'66.

The rising sophomores have yet to elect the house presidents of Clewell and Babcock. After room drawing the junior house presidents of Lehman, Sisters, and Gramley will be voted upon, as will the senior presidents of Strong and Bitting.

Decorative Murals Adorn Clewell's Rec Room Walls

"Fools' names and fools' faces often seen in public places!" But this cliché is not true of the walls around Salem, especially in the Rec Room of Clewell.

The Rec Room is undergoing a complete change, from new furniture in Little Cozy to wild paintings on the walls. Also some of the furniture in the big room has been recovered and, for some strange reason, many new ash trays have been made available.

On one of the walls a big SALEM has been painted in yellow, outlined with black and surrounded by many significant figures. The drawings were done by sophomore Judy Clevinger. One figure is a girl, with a forced grin on her face and shaky knees, standing in front of a clock showing 15 'til one.

Another girl is holding a big yellow mum signifying all the football games that Salemites attend. Nothing more can be said about her, except that she's wearing a sophomore blazer.

A "Marty Ross-type" character is sitting on top of the "L" reading Man Magazine, while a Nun from the "Ivy Covered Convent" stands in her red sneakers reading "Playgirl".

Also on the same wall is a girl on cloud nine. She is wearing a huge diamond on her left hand and her head is encircled with hearts and flowers, which is typical of many Salemites.

On the opposite wall are pennants representing every school in the hearts and minds of Salemites, and the letters of many fraternities.

"We also have plans for the other walls in the Rec Room," said sophomore Dale Eyerly, head of the Rec Room Committee.

She said on one wall will be an abstract mural, "Fiasco", by sophomore Courtney Fitts. In it will be such items as a pack of cigarettes, a bridge hand, a champagne bottle, and other items found in the possession of typical Salemites.

"Also on the wall next to the television will be a big horrible ugly green thing," added Dale, "with a caption saying 'Sex Rears Its Ugly Head' under it."

Other plans include travel posters for the Little Cozy and another painting, which will be a big piano with "Mad" in place of the manufacturer's name and the Alfred E. Newman head and "What, Me Worry?" in the middle of the music stand.

Salemite Rates; Is All-American

The Salemite has been awarded an All-American rating by the American Collegiate Press Association. Issues published during the first semester of the school year, 1964-1965, were judged in comparison with newspapers from other colleges with similar enrollment, methods, and frequency of publication. They were judged by professional newspaper men and women and journalism professors. The newspapers were judged in three general categories: coverage, content, and physical properties, i.e. layout, headlines, typography, and photography.

The Salemite scored high in the areas of coverage, photography and general makeup. The paper was commended by the judges for the thought and variety shown in the feature articles, for the "lively looking" layout of the editorial page and for the quality of the photography. The diction used in headlines was criticized. The judge also commented that the administration was not used as an effective news source.

In previous semesters, the Salemite has been awarded five Second Class and five First Class Honor Ratings. This is the Salemite's first All-American rating.

Robbin Causey was thrilled with the news. She said that this was a "fitting reward for the hard work that we put into the paper."

Trustees Honor Salem President

At the Trustee's meeting April 7, the names of two presidents of Salem were selected as the names of two buildings. The new dormitory will be named in honor of Dr. Dale H. Gramley and the science building will be named in memory of the late Bishop Howard E. Rondthaler, president of Salem from 1909 to 1949.

In addition the fine arts building was named "The Fine Arts Center." Various parts of this building will be "living memorials" to five Winston-Salem residents and memorials to three deceased citizens.

The large 800-seat auditorium will be called the "Ralph P. Hanes Auditorium." Hanes, a former president and vice president of Old Salem, Inc., has been an active supporter of the college. This auditorium should be completed in time for commencement June 6.

Ann Richert shows Mary Dameron one of the many places they must include in their summer plans as Oslo scholars.

Salem Awards Scholarship For Summer Study In Oslo

In assembly on April 8, junior Mary Dameron and sophomore Ann Richert received the news of winning the Oslo Scholarships. Ann confessed that she was "just floored" and Mary "simply couldn't believe it." Both girls are excited about their summer in Norway, and they are making big plans for studies and travels.

The two girls have dreamed of this opportunity for quite a while now. Mary Dameron has been fascinated with the program since her freshman year, and, of course, both girls have been thinking more about it since the day when all applications were due in Dean Hixson's office to be considered by the Oslo Committee. In addition to other data, recommendations from two faculty members, with the exception of those on the Oslo Committee, and from one student, are required.

The two Oslo Scholarships provide a six-weeks course at the University of Oslo during the summer. The grants of $800 each have been presented to a rising senior and a rising junior for almost ten years, and have always covered transportation by air to Oslo, tuition, and room and board. The donor of the scholarship is Former Ambassador to Norway, L. Corrin Strong, the son of Mrs. Hattie M. Strong. Mrs. Strong presented to Salem College Strong Dormitory and Corrin Refectory and her son has carried on her philanthropic tradition.

The University of Oslo Summer School on Norwegian civilization for English-speaking foreign students was first held in 1947. It was based on the idea that Norway and its cultural contributions have a genuine quality which makes studying them worthwhile. In addition, Norway is considered highly representative of Europe as a whole, and the study of Norway thus offers an excellent introduction to general European problems. Though the school was first designed just for American students, there are now a good percentage of students from 32 other countries in Africa, Asia, Australia, and Europe, in addition to those from North America and Norway.

The scope of the school has been gradually widened. The core of the curriculum is a general survey of Norwegian life and culture attended by all participants. In addition, elective courses are offered on many specialized subjects. Both Mary and Ann are taking International Relations as an elective and possibly a course in Norwegian art. Mary, an English major, also wants to take a course in Norwegian literature.

Both girls plan to do some traveling in Europe. The program sponsors several side trips, but they include mostly Scandinavia. The two girls are going to do some traveling on their own after the summer school has ended. The pair sets off for this exciting summer early in June, leaving New York June 19 and arriving in Oslo June 28. They will be at the school for six weeks and then will travel for approximately two weeks.

Annual Sunrise Service To Begin At Home Church

The annual Sunrise Service will begin Easter morning at 5:15 on the steps of the Home Moravian Church. Led by the Reverend J. C. Hughes, pastor of the Home Church, the congregation will move in procession from the church steps to the Moravian cemetery.

Prior to the service, Salem is sponsoring a breakfast for students and their parents which begins at 4:45 a.m. in the refectory. Guests may attend, but tickets for them must be obtained from Mrs. Tesch. Sugarcake and coffee will be served, and girls may unlock the dorms at 4:30 a.m. so that they may attend the breakfast.

Also Mrs. Heidbreder requests that Salemites who have cars on campus move them from the square and Church Street Saturday night. The area for the tennis courts may be used for parking during this period.

Judy Clevinger, Dale Eyerly, and Florence Pollock hold up their thumbs and apply paint to give Clewell Rec Room that "new spring look."
