Salemite 'Runners' Make Early Morning Journeys

Hot water comforts the tired feet of freshmen Barbie Barton and Mary McNair after a trek to the printer.

By Dana Evans

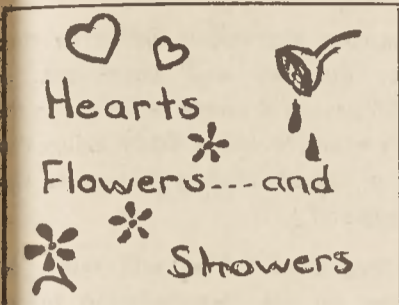

Coming from high school with spare time in mind, unsuspecting freshmen enthusiastically volunteered for countless jobs to fulfill their desire to participate. One such position was running the newspaper to press Wednesday and Thursday mornings at 7:45 a.m.

Upon notification, freshmen "runners" Barbie Barton and Mary McNair looked forward to the refreshing jaunt to the local printers at dawn, while senior "runners" Edna Harvey, Margie Winstead, Ann McMaster, and Bebe Anderson envisioned a good excuse to drive that so-longed-for Mustang.

Setting out for a new adventure, freshmen "runners" started on their journey at 7:45 a.m. across the street, the highway, the . . . until finally they were standing engulfed in printing media, the smell of fresh ink, stacks of discarded paper, and unorganized materials, while men in long dirty aprons looked up and smiled warmly.

At last the manilla printing envelope was handed over into the hands of a printer. A quick jaunt back followed by a normal breakfast ensued, with the satisfied feeling of having accomplished something significant before 8 a.m. when many others lay sleeping in their

Semester break was extra special for a number of Salemites. Pam Hoffman received a lavalier as a birthday present from Ray Onyx, a Lambda Chi at Penn State. Mary McNair celebrated the end of the first semester by getting pinned to Paul Livingston, a Chi Psi at Carolina. Ed White, president of APO at Clemson, gave his pin to Jane Bray. Jane Ann Chisholm agreed to wear John Morris' Zeta Psi pin on Saturday night; but he didn't have it with him, so he gave it to her at church the next day. John is a Virginia man.

Other pins have been around longer. Kristie Dickinson has been wearing Thompson Miller's Kappa Sig pin since January eighth, and Amy Murray granted Paul Orser his birthday wish on January tenth when she agreed to wear his Sig Ep pin. Thompson and Paul go to Wake Forest.

A Wake graduate, Con Henderson, gave Fay Jackson a diamond for Christmas, but her friends were dismayed to find that she didn't have it on when she returned to school. Fay explained that her ring was too large and was being sized. It arrived in the mail last week and now rests on the appropriate finger. Con will receive his Master's from the University of Iowa in June, and the wedding is planned for the nineteenth of August.

June tenth is the date for Deebe Eyerly's wedding to Bob Colson, a senior at West Point. That unusual class ring Deebe has been wearing since Thanksgiving isn't really a class ring at all. It's her engagement ring, a miniature of Bob's West Point ring, exactly like it except for the stone. He presented it to her around three o'clock Thanksgiving morning.

Marianne Buie hasn't yet set the date for her wedding. She received her diamond in December, from Bob Gingher, a senior at State.
