EDITORIAL

Last Sunday a student hurriedly had to scrounge enough money from friends to make an emergency trip to her home in South Carolina. She, being an out-of-state student, had limited resources for cashing checks in Winston-Salem; but on this day she was unable to obtain ready cash anywhere on campus or in town. If this student had been less fortunate, she would have been unable to leave Winston-Salem. Her dilemma, unfortunately, was similar to the financial problems of other Salemites who need money at the last minute.

Salem students no longer come primarily from North Carolina. Often these students are unwilling to establish in-state checking accounts for personal reasons. These students have always been subjected to the inconvenience of having limited sources for credit in town; now they have fewer resources. Once they could cash checks at the Salem Book Store; now that it has been leased to a private business, the bookstore no longer is a direct affiliate of Salem College. As a result we are unable to cash checks there anymore. The Mayberry, U. S. A. always has conformed to a nebulous program of allowing a maximum of $5.00 to be cashed by Salem girls. Currently, even this resource is undependable. Our Comptroller's Office is open to students from 10:30-12:30 and 1::30-4:00 on weekdays, and is not open at all on weekends.

If we happen to get to the Comptrollers at all, we are lucky. This "student convenience" does not even remain open during our lunch hour, which is the only time some students are able to attend to business matters. The late opening hour and the early closing hour conflict with our class schedules also. If the Comptroller opened earlier or remained open later we could at least account for some last minute business.

Salem students must consider other problems when deciding how to save their pennies for rainy days. If we cash checks for large sums of money, we are eventual victims of robberies which occur sporadically anytime, but which seem to be increasing this year. Salem has had difficulty with local theft rings in the past; it seems that necessitating students to keep cash available merely invites further robberies by these thieves.

Salem students handle enough money annually to make the presence of a campus bank, such as NCNB or Wachovia, feasible. At least through them we could have a school-associated bank through which to clear our local credit. Recently NCNB opened a computerized center in which credit card holders of the bank can cash checks up to $100 24 hours a day. Wachovia, moreover, in an effort to suit business customers, has begun a regular banking hour policy which allows working people and students to handle money matters till 5:00 p.m. without a lunchtime interruption. The problem with these sources other than that they necessitate transferring business from the home banks, is that they are inaccessible to Salem students who do not own a car and are unable to obtain other transportation.

Already this year Salem students have had unwanted visitors to their rooms. Some of these students have had money stolen. This in itself is frustrating, since our school guards are hired to prevent any occurrences which hinder our well-being, but there seems to be no alternative to the unwanted-visitor syndrome. At this time either we keep money available for emergencies, which makes us targets for theft, or we take our chances without money and hope we need not use taxis or buses, or make emergency purchases in town. Shall we stand for this inefficiency and inconvenience, or shall we end this situation by petitioning the administration to either improve our present campus facilities, or add facilities which would eliminate our problem?

McGovern States Mid-East Stan Clarifies Trade, Tariff Positions

THE MIDDLE EAST

It is the obligation of those of us who have led the peace movement in this country to educate our constituents to the vital distinction between preventing war in the Mideast by placing the American guarantee behind Israel's right to survive, and perpetuating the war in Indochina by fighting the internal struggles of the people of that area for an indefinite period of time with American troops and

May 4, 1971

Senator McGovern has repeatedly and emphatically stated that he would not allow the justifiable American revulsion against the Indochina experience to weaken our will to remain strong and vigilant in other parts of the world. The Senator has specifically drawn strong distinctions between our need to disengage from Indochina and our interest in preserving peace in the Middle East.

Senator McGovern has made clear his recognition of the fact that Israel is a viable democracy enjoying the strongest possible allegiance of its citizens, not a military dictatorship lacking popular support. He has emphasized that the Middle East is a crucial area of the world in which American interests are vital; Indochina is not.

Senator McGovern has shown his commitment to Israel's security by pledging his Administration to a continuation of all the arms sales, and shipments which Israel needs for her survival. To aid Israel in keeping her domestic economy strong and in financing her crushing defense burden, Senator McGovern has pledged generous economic aid.

His record in Congress is one of support for every legislative effort to give economic, military and diplomatic support to Israel.

Senator McGovern has also stated his conviction that a true Middle Eastern peace can be achieved only through direct negotiations between the Arabs and Israelis, and that no outside power, including the United States, should try to impose terms or force Israel to withdraw her forces from the occupied territories until secure and defensible borders are agreed upon.

Senator McGovern has fought for the security and independence of Israel since his first year in Congress, 1957, when he warned that American aid given to Arab states to "fight Communism" would be used against Israel. On the floor of the House, McGovern said:

As a nation that has played a key role in the creation of the State of Israel, America may be ill-advised in strengthening hand of those Arab chieftains insist they will not rest Israel is destroyed. It would ly be a victory for democrat democracy's showcase in the dle East were destroyed by despots with help of Ame arms and materials.

Senator McGovern has also duced legislation designed Israel in the resettlement of Jews. In this connection he h posed an $85 million program. available refugee funds, to Israel defray the costs of new immigrants from the Union.

The record of Senator Mc indicates that, from his first Congress in 1957, he has been orous champion of Israel's caus outspoken advocate on bela Soviet Jewry, and a leader fight to pressure a reluctant) Administration into providing with military, economic and matic suupport.

TRADE AND TARIFF

Senator McGovern realize importance of world trade for national peace and progress in nations. By exchange of good

(Continued on p. 6)

of cabbages and kings

by Sarah Dorrier

In the aftermath of Founder's Day, my cabbages are a bit wilted, did manage to stagger up to third floor Clewell to talk with Carol P about the Salem College Republican Club.

Beginning last spring, Carol laid the groundwork for a chapter Contacts at Appalachian, Davidson, and here in Winston-Salem gaw the procedure for organizing a club and obtaining a charter. A school have a Republican group of at least ten people in order to be recog by the North Carolina Federation of College Republicans. The NCFC requires state dues, a membership list, and a letter of certification from Carol, who has been active in Teenage Republican clubs since grade, is president of the Salem group. Ann Blencowe is vice-pres Chris Moran serves as secretary, and Dee Wilson counts the money. is also Issues Chairman of the College Republican State Executive mittee. This is a sort of steering committee that consists of approximation twenty members from the various campuses in North Carolina.

The highlights of club activities are the NCFCR convention held fall and spring. This fall's group of over a hundred delegates conver Chapel Hill. They drafted a new constitution and passed resolutions porting various Republican candidates. The NCFCR has also filed a suit against the Daily Tar Heel, protesting compulsory buying of a wing newspaper.

Salem's club is the largest Republican group at any private colle North Carolina. They have nine convention votes and sent five delega-

The Republican club has been canvassing in the dorms to see ho campus feels about the November elections. Carol mentioned the sibility of a mock election which would be sponsored by the NCFCF club also plans to sponsor some speakers. Grace Rohrer, the only v running for state house in North Carolina, has expressed an inte coming to Salem, and Hamilton Horton, a Winston-Salem resident state senator, would like to have a forum here on campus. Durn symposium on Women in Politics, club members will act as guid Grace Armitage, the president of the National Federation of Repu

If you're interested in working in the Republican campaign, get in with Carol Perrin. She will direct you to the Forsyth County Repl Party Headquarters. For those of you who're more interested in the tional campaign, Susan Fauntleroy is the Nixonette chairman he

P.S. McGovern supporters take heart - equal coverage will be given near future.

John Schmitz Takes A.I.P. Helm, Blasts Democrats, Republicans

-by Stephen Weissman/AFS

An investigative reporter of long experience, Weissman is an editor of Ramparts Press and former editor of Ramparts magazine. He now lives in Southern California, where he is completing a book on the Green Revolution in Asia.

John G. Schmitz, the presidential candidate of the American Independent Party, is not making much of a splash this election. But that's only because, as the Southern California Congressman himself explains, the television networks and national news services are engaged in a conspiracy of silence against

And no wonder. For Representative Schmitz, darling of the right wing and candidate of the party which at first backed Governor

ANNOUNCEMENT

IRC is trying to find a new name. Please help us by entering suggestions to Anna Moore Butzner or other active members of IRC. Remember that our club is aimed toward relations and communications in the community, on campus, and in the world around us. We try to engender political and social awareness among our student members. Help us by taking an interest in our activities, including our campaign to change our name

Coming soon * STUDENTS AT

THE MODEL UN.

He does, of course, support his local police, God, prayer in segregated shools, individual rights, and free enterpri

He opposes abortion, busing, bureaucracy, federal welfare programs, higher taxes, the United Nations, and above all-he sayssocialism, communism, and other

Democrats and Republicans, he explains, are just two wings of American Socialism, and the only difference he sees between the two major presidential candidates is this:

"Mr. Nixon wants to surrender South Vietnam to the Communists on the installment plan, while Mr. McGovern wants to surrender im-

Yet when Schmitz comes to pass the blame, he doesn't point a finger at Moscow, Peking, Gus Hall, Angela Davis, or even Dr. Spock.

Not at all. When Schmitz unmasks "the real conspiracy," he joins with the Communists in attacking the key institutions of American capitalism.

In opposing American policy in Vietnam, for example, he does not single out a few traitors in the Department of State, as did Senator Joe McCarthy. Schmitz lambastes American business, which makes money selling the sinews of war to both the United States and the Communist bloc.

In charging the news media with

George Wallace, sounds just like a conspiracy to silence him, he does not simply criticize the newsmen as did Vice-President Spiro Agnew. Schmitz calls on the carpet the "fatat" owners of NBC and CBS, some most important names in American finance.

> Schmitz hits them all, all of the old Communist bugaboos: Wall Street, the international banking houses, and the name-brand corporations; the big foundations, the RAND Corporation, and the Council on Foreign Relations; the Fords, the Rockefellers, and the Kennedys.

> It is these wealthy, highly-educated insiders who control both Communism and creeping Socialism, Schmitz explains. And they do it not to create some classless society but to further their own private control of the international financial system and to satisfy their own "international conspiratorial drive for power."

The analysis is a bit simplistic, borrowed heavily from Gary Allen's None Dare Call it Conspiracy, for which Schmitz wrote the introduction. The constant harping on "conspiracies" is unnecessary.

But shorn of the gobble-de-gook, Schmitz's line is exactly what one might expect from I. F. Stone, the Revisionist Historians, and other tools of the Communistic New Left. Surely the Congressman shouldn't expect the more established media to join him in purveying such vicious propaganda.