Nader, Udall, Mayer Featured At UNC Survival Symposium

CHAPEL HILL — Scientists, musicians, politicians and writers concerned about the future of planet earth will be at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill March 23-April 5 for a symposium on human survival, "One World. Your Future?"

Ralph Nader, Stewart Udall, William Ruckelshaus and Jean Mayer are among the speakers in the first week which will examine problems and suggest solutions in several areas — overpopulation, pollution, poor nutrition and resource depletion.

"We want to make the students, faculty and townspeople aware of the problems and provide a forum for discussion of various alternative solutions," said symposium chairperson Larry Shirley, a junior from Cary. The symposium is sponsored jointly by the Carolina Union Current Affairs Committee, Institute of Nutrition, Institute of Environmental Studies and Carolina Population Center.

Ralph Nader, director of the Center for Responsive Law, will deliver the keynote address at 8 p.m. Sunday, March 23, in Memorial Hall. Nader's speech will provide an overview of the issues to be examined during the symposium.

Monday's focus is food and famine. Speakers will be human geneticist James Neal on "Genetic Consequences of Malthusian Catastrophe" at 2 p.m. in Hamilton Hall; Dennis Pirages, co-author with Paul Ehrlich of "Ark II: Social Response to Environmental Imperatives," on "Human Survival—Ark II" at 4 p.m. in Memorial Hall; and Garrett Hardin, author of "Voyage of the Spaceship Beagle," on "Lifeboat Ethic" at 8 p.m. in Memorial Hall.

Speeches on Tuesday (March 25) highlight population problems and policies. Internationally known nutritionist Jean Mayer will speak on "How Can the World Be Fed?" at 11 a.m. in the Great Hall in the Carolina Union. At 4 p.m. in the Great Hall, Neville

Karakaratne will speak on "Population Development and Environment in the Third World." Karakaratne is Ambassador to the U.S. from Lanka. A debate on limiting population growth will be held at 8 in the Great Hall. Participants are Edgar Chasteen, author of "A Case for Compulsory Birth Control;" Michael Carder, a proponent of freedom of choice in birth control and editor of "Concerned Demography," and Stephanie Mille, former director of Planned Parenthood and author of "The Joy of Birth Control."

Three speakers will discuss "Ecological Suicide and Resource Depletion" on Wednesday, March 26. Carter Schelling, who works with Ecology Action of Palo Alto will discuss "Survival Gardening" at 2 p.m. (location to be announced). Author of the best selling textbook "The Fundamentals of Human Ecology," Eugene Odum, will speak on "The Technological Fix" at 4 p.m. in the Great Hall. Stewart Udall, former U.S. Secretary of the Interior and author of "The Quiet Crisis" and "The Energy Balloon," will speak at 9 p.m. in Hill Hall on "A Rational Long-Range Energy Policy for America."

Thursday's speakers will explore the concept of a steady state economy. Dr. Herman Daly, associate professor of economics at Louisiana State University and editor of "Toward a Steady State Economy," will speak at 4 p.m. in the Great Hall on "Economics for the Future." William Ruckelshaus, former head of the Environmental Protection Agency, will speak on "Environment and the Limiting of Growth" at 8 p.m. in the Great Hall.

The second week of the symposium will focus on the crisis of leadership and challenge politicians to offer solutions to the problems. The final weekend will deal with individual responses which can be made by community members.

Asolo Program Remains Dormant

Some of you may remember Salem's summer school in Asolo, Italy, a program lasting around nine weeks. Salem students lived in a lovely villa in the village of Asolo, attended classes in art, music, history, Italian, and religion taught mostly by Salem faculty, and went on frequent field trips to Florence, Rome or smaller towns with interesting attractions.

Even last year, the preliminary steps were taken to get students interested. What happened? The answer — money. Consideration of the summer school last year had to be given up because there was almost no one who could afford to go (though quite a few of us were interested.)

This year, since economic conditions nation-wide certainly have not improved, the administration decided that Asolo would have to be dormant another year. It became obvious that it would simply be impossible to offer the Asolo program at a reasonable cost this year, especially since the cost of living has risen even more sharply in Italy than ours has here.

So there you have it. Asolo for this year just couldn't be. Next year? The chance is still there. Right now we will just have to wait—and hope. I, for one, would hate to see such a wonderful program die.

Poet John Ciardi To Speak

The popular and famous poet, John Ciardi, will be the Lecture Assembly guest speaker on Tuesday, April 8 in Hanes Auditorium at 7:30 p.m. His poems have touched many people because of the sensitivity and warmth he incorporates into them. They are creations about the "experiences of ideas" and are arranged in a skillful and relivable way with perfected rhythm. Ciardi's poetry "takes man through the moment of experience to the moment of insight."

Dr. Ciardi is the poetry editor for the Saturday Review and has been given many awards and prizes for his literary works. Because of the growing popularity and appreciation for poetry today, Salem College is fortunate to have Dr. Ciardi lecture. His visit will be a valuable and unique experience.

"The Apology"

The Salemite wishes to apologize to Cheryl Paschal, Margaret Richardson, and Carolyn Davis for the mixup in pictures which occurred in the elections issue. With so many photographs and speeches to keep track of, mistakes are easy to make. However, we are sorry for any inconvenience we may have caused.

April Arts Planned

The week of April 21-25 is going to be exciting, fun, and fantastic! April Arts is having their annual week filled with activities for everyone to enjoy and participate in. They are sponsoring such events as a talent show, fashion show, and many other activities during the afternoons and nights. The week begins Monday night with a Mad-Hatter Contest at supper and ends with an Alumnae Tea on Friday. Start making those hats and planning for a week you will never forget. Watch the next copy of the Salemite for more details of the times and events.

Y-Auction Was A Great Success

According to Mary Lou Cunningham, the Y Auction was a huge success. She reports that they received over $650 which is the biggest earnings received in three years. She attributes this success to the expert auctioneer, Dr. Lazarus who did a grand job selling the items. The YWCA wishes to express its appreciation for the students' support.

Announcement

SNEA announcement — On April 15, Dr. Elizabeth Welch will speak on education in Russia at 7:30 in the Drama Workshop. All interested students are invited to attend.

Rondthaler Competition Begins

The alumnae association hopes many students will enter the competition for the Katherine B. Rondthaler awards to be announced May 15.

Prizes are offered in music composition, art (any medium), prose, and poetry.

All Salem students, regardless of major, are eligible to enter each category. Judges selected off-campus as well as from among the faculty decide the winners.

Entries may be turned in through Friday, April 18, to Mr. Mangum's office (art), Dean Sandresky's office (music) and the alumnae office (prose and poetry).

The Rondthaler awards were established by the alumnae association in 1951 to honor the wife of Salem's 12th president.
