Who's Who Senior Profiles

Staff Report

Seniors nominated as members of Who's Who Among Students in American Universities and Colleges were notified after mid-term break of their selection to this honorary organization.

Nominees will be listed in the 44th edition of the annual Who's Who publication, and will receive a certificate during graduation exercises.

Among the fourteen seniors selected were, Carol Coggin, an American Studies major who has served as Chief Marshal and currently is chairman of Dansalems and Fremdendienerin; Rebecca Dunbar, a Biology major and member of the Honor Society also serving as an officer for Lablings and as a columnist for the Salemite; History major Jane Dittmann, a member of Phi Alpha Theta, vice-president of the Senior class, associate editor of the Salemite, and a member of the Admissions Committee and Fremdendienerin.

Also selected were Suzanne Eggleston, a music major who accompanies the Salem Academy Glee Club and is a member of the Incunabula staff and the Honor Society; Math major, Jenny Eury who serves as Day Student president and is a member of the Student Affairs Committee; Beth Fenters, an English major and editor of the Salemite, who has served as president of Archways and on the Academic Council in addition to being chairman of the Publications Board and a marshal; Lisa Greenberg, a biology major who has been active in Lablings as secretary-treasurer and president, and currently is president of Sisters Dorm and Chairman of Academic Council.

The list of nominees continues with Art major Jan Guiton, current Director of Student Activities, member of Fremdendienerin, Alpha Psi Omega and former Freshman class president and marshal; Lynn Hill, Art and History major active in Alpha Psi Omega, Phi Alpha Theta, Incunabula and currently serving as president of Pierrettes; English and Classical Studies major, Beth Jones, former editor of the Salemite and current staff member, who also has participated in Pierrette productions; SGA president Kathy Kirkpatrick, a Psychology major who has been active in Honor Council and Archways.

Completing the list of Who's Who selection are Psychology and Education major Susan Leonard, current chairman of Honor Council and past chairman of Interdorm, secretary of Interdorm and Honor Council representative; Sarah Parsons, Philosophy major and Senior class president, who also serves as captain of the hockey team, a member of the Tennis team and was treasurer of student government; Margaretta Yarborough, English and Classical Studies major, a member of the Honor Society and Salemite staff, who has served as news editor for that publication.

Women Return to Salem for Continuing Education

By Margaretta Yarborough

She returned to school after rearing a family; she earned her doctorate degree. When she became Salem's academic dean, Evelyn Helmick spearheaded a program to make going back to school easier for other women.

Salem Studies, the newest part of Salem's continuing education program, is a fully-accredited liberal arts program designed for women returning to college. It is tailored for women who have to juggle family responsibilities with classwork. A nursery school, staffed by Salem teachers, keeps preschoolers busy while their mothers attend class. Classes are held from 9:00 a.m. to 12:00 noon on Tuesdays and Thursday, and each woman pursues her degree program at her own pace. Three majors are offered as a part of Salem Studies: American studies, home economics, and economics and management.

To make the transition to college life easier, a two-week seminar is held in August to give prospective students confidence in their goals and learning skills. In addition, counselling is available through the Lifespan Center.

Thirty-two people are enrolled in Salem Studies or are seeking degrees with other majors in continuing education. Seventy-six continuing education students are enrolled as non-degree candidates.

When Charlie Bolton graduates, he will leave the degree program entirely to women. A recent decision allows only women to enroll as degree candidates at Salem, although men can be and are enrolled in the non-degree continuing education program.

Lois Hicks started taking some courses because she enjoyed it. Now she is an English major and is classified as a junior. "I wouldn't do if I didn't enjoy it. Most of my friends don't go back to school, and they think I'm very energetic to do it. But I just find it more stimulating than bridge or tea parties."

Her enthusiasm for the program is contagious, even down to physical education courses. These courses are required for continuing education students just as they are for regular students, although individual modifications can be made when necessary. Lois feels strongly about the need for exercise for women of any age, and she plans to take physical education throughout her years at Salem.

She also is glad to be at a women's college. Having attended a coed institution previously, she finds the lack of male competition in the classroom stimulating. There seems to be less restraint on the

Field Hockey Season Review

By Holly Freeburg

In spite of a disappointing season record of 0-5-1, the Salem field hockey team has played extremely well, according to coach Mrs. Susan Miller.

Mrs. Miller said that the Wake Forest game which was tied, was "the best game Salem has played in several years." Ann Appich scored the goal in that game.

Other game results have been: Salem vs. High Point 0-4; Salem vs. Duke J.V. 0-3; Salem vs. Averett 0-1; Salem vs. High Point 0-5 and Salem vs. Davidson 0-4.

Salem has continued to play well this season despite several injuries to players. Kim Hineine has been playing with a broken thumb since the first High Point game. Also, Beth Crozer sprained her ankle and has not been able to finish the season.

Sarah Parsons, the only senior team member, should be congratulated for her enthusiasm and physical skill contributed to the team. Also, Beth Cunningham and Cornelia Outten deserve special recognition for their versatility and stamina in unfamiliar game positions.
