Salem Scholarships

By Laura Babb

Salem College for generations has been known throughout the southeast for scholastic excellence. Honor awards are given at Salem College every year to incoming freshmen. They are not based on financial need. These awards include the Lucy Hanes Chatham Awards, Salem Scholar Awards, and Nell Folger Glenn Music Scholarship.

The Lucy Hanes Chatham Awards are offered on a competitive basis in recognition of academic and personal achievement. Each award is in the amount of $3000, renewable each year, so long as the student remains in good standing and is making satisfactory progress. An applicant is judged on quality of academic achievement and personal recommendations.

Also considered are her potential for leadership on campus and in other activities, and her sense of responsibility and concern for others.

This year the recipients are Kathy Glover and Anne McMurria. In speaking with both girls it is apparent that they are very well rounded. Kathy was a contestant for the Morehead Scholarship, a scholarship at Mary Baldwin and the Chatham Award here at Salem. Kathy chose Salem because of the personal attention she received and because the school fit all the ideals she was looking for in a good college. She intends to double major in English and Economics management.

Kathy has a variety of interests including ballet dancing, tennis, modeling, reading and collecting antique books. This summer Kathy worked for Jesse Helms and has worked on many other national student groups. She models in Greensboro and was on her high school tennis team.

Kathy would also like to run for an office for the freshman class. Kathy and Anne filled out applications for the scholarships and through panel discussions, personal interviews and writing essays they were narrowed down to the winners.

Salem was Anne's first choice. She also plans to major in economics management. Anne's main interests lie mainly with sports. She is a member of the field hockey team and she's a fire captain in Gramley. Anne was chairman of the freshman entrance for Founder's Day and is interested in student government. Both girls like Salem and are very happy here.

The Salem scholars were chosen for their quality of academic achievement and potential for future success.

Each girl was awarded $500, renewable annually. Lisa Godwin, Laurna Sayers and Mary Baird were the winners. Lisa was offered another scholarship from Indiana but chose Salem because Salem suited her interests better. She intends to double major in Spanish and psychology. Her interests include soccer, needlepoint and ice skating. She is a member of Circle K.

Laurna has always wanted to attend Salem and getting the scholarship made her decision easier. Laurna would like to major in Learning Disabilities. Her interests include singing, sewing, volleyball and soccer. She is a member of the yearbook staff.

Salem was Mary's first choice. Her intended major is economics management. Her interest include math, drama and sewing. She is involved in the play production Blithe Spirit here at Salem. All the girls were selected through their written essays and personal interviews. They are all enjoying Salem and like the new friends they have made.

Karen Winburn and Marianne Williams were the recipients of the Nell Folger Glenn Music Scholarships.

They were selected on the basis of general musicianship, technical proficiency and level of repertoire. An audition and interview were part of the selection. Both girls play the piano and want to major in music education.

Marianne is a member of the chorus and WRA. Karen enjoys all sports and crossstich. Marianne and Karen like Salem and are pleased with their classes and activities. All the recipients of the scholarships were well deserving of the honor.

Where To Park?

The parking committee would like to thank the students who have cooperated with the parking regulations this year. The situation has improved but can still be better. Observing the parking regulations is important because it is not fair to other students and members of the community for certain students to monopolize the parking on front campus.

The parking committee is sympathetic to student needs and realizes that it is vital, at times, to park on front campus. That is why the rules are so important.

Parking on front campus should be an asset to everyone instead of a problem.

Please review the rules in the student handbook. A few reminders follow:

- 1- Sisters, South, Clewell and Bitting park in FAC.
- 2- Gramley, Babcock, and Strong park at the Tennis Courts.
- 3- No parking on front campus for an extended period of time.

4- No parking on front campus on Sunday mornings.

5- No parking in front of residents' homes or on Blum and Walnut Streets.

6- No parking in Faculty, Church or Handicapped places.

Two warnings will be issued for the first two infractions and then each case will be reviewed individually.

Punishments will range from fines to Interdorm penalties.

Thanks again to those who are helping to improve the situation.
