Dr. Eulalia Cobb Appointed Dean

by Amy Washburn

After a search lasting throughout this year, a new Dean of the College has been hired. The Search Committee voted unanimously to ask Dr. Eulalia B. Cobb to accept the post.

Dr. Mary Homrighous, chairperson of the Search Committee, says of Dr. Cobb, "She has enthusiasm and vitality and good ideas. She has a great commitment to the liberal arts, and recognizes the changing role for liberal arts in contemporary society."

Dr. Cobb is currently a professor of foreign languages at Western Maryland College. She has served as a consultant to various educational institutions, as well as speaking as a visiting scholar and lecturer.

Among the many academic achievements of Dr. Cobb are the facts that she is a Danforth Fellow, a Woodrow Wilson Fellow, and an American Council on Education Fellow. She is also a member of Phi Beta Kappa.

Among the issues Dr. Cobb will be addressing next year is the current problem between traditional age students and C.E.'s and A.D.P.'s. Dr. Homrighous remarks, "Dr. Cobb understands the needs for integration of residential students and C.E.'s. She realizes the importance of a cohesive student body."

Dr. Cobb obtained a B.A. from Birmingham-Southern College, an M.A. from UNC-Chapel Hill, and her Ph.D. from the University of Alabama. She has a husband, Edwin, and two children, Sonya and Allison.

Dr. Cobb and her family will move to Winston-Salem this summer.

Millie Eubanks, S.G.A. President in 1987-88, hands over the gavel and the ceremonial robe to Ginger Saunders, as she accepts her duties as S.G.A. President for 1988-89. Other officers were also installed at the S.G.A. meeting on Tuesday, April 12.

Hampton Becomes Elkin Chief of Police

by Julie Stone

Steve Hampton's childhood dream of one day having his own police department has come true.

On May 2, 1988, Hampton will be sworn in as Chief of Police of Elkin, N.C.. He's excited about the move to Elkin because of the city's expansion and growth. Elkin has seen 25% growth in the last two years. Hampton feels it is a good match because Elkin lacks law enforcement training, something that he is very interested in and plans to expand.

Hampton has initiated many changes during the three years he has been at Salem. Under his direction, the Department of Safety and Security became the Department of Public Safety. In addition to the change in name, security officers completed 441 hours of basic law enforcement training with the Forsyth County Sheriff's Department. This training enabled them to be sworn which meant they have the power of arrest, and they may investigate their own cases rather than having to bring in the Police Department. Salem now has a combination of sworn and non-sworn officers.

A part-time safety officer has been added to keep track of inventory of chemicals on campus, and a record-keeping system has also been implemented to log reports. In 1986-87 Hampton taught in the Criminal Justice Program at Forsyth Technical College. In essence, he has increased the number of officers and upgraded the quality of the Public Safety Department.

Hampton says he has fond memories of Salem. After ten years on the streets, he was burnt out. From 1975-80, Hampton was in the patrol division of the Forsyth County Sheriff's Department. In 1980, he moved to narcotics and worked undercover. In 1982, he became a criminal investigation detective. He believes Salem helped him gain perspective. After working so long on the streets, he was refreshed to see, "good people doing good things." He said it made him realize the
