STATE WIDE CONTESTS

This year's boys of the Future Farmer Organization have a fine opportunity of centering education- al contest: Chapter contest, pub- lic speaking, livestock judging, music supervised practices, and star farmer and project story.

With the exception of the pro- ject story Future Farmers must enter the local contest, county federation, half didtrict, dis- trict, and state to become a state winner. A Future Farmer may write a story of his project and send it in to the TAR HEEL TALKS. The four best in the state will be published in each issue. Then the best on is picked out for the state winner.

The Bailey Chapter entered the seed judging and identification contest held February 2, at Green- ville.

Through these contests a boy may secure practical knowledge of Future Farming.

WANTED : SCOUTMASTER

Carl Walker Jr.

Mr. L. S. Inscoe, County Sup- erintendent of Public Schools in Nash County, is striving to get a Boy Schout Troop in Bailey. The only thing stopping him is find- ing a leader. Mr. Inscoe sent several blanks over here to be filled out by boys who are in- terested in being Boy Scouts. Of the eleven blanks filled out each named Mr. Brooks Privette as the desired Scoutmaster.

Bailey needs a Boy Scout Troop very badly, because there are so many boys around here with no organization. The Boy Scout organ- ization is to teach boys how to be good citizens. It also teaches them handicraft, health craft, campcraft, and swimming. The boys of Bailey hope all good citizens will get a Boy Scout Troop in Bailey.

BOOK CAMPAIGN FOR THE LIBRARY
Marks Underwood

Mr. Walker is planning a book campaign to secure books for the library. This campaign is to start in a few days. Each child is to see how many books he can bring. Miss Ferrell will take these books and classify them according to their authors, their name, and their type. The library is especially short on nature and lacks any very intersting advent- ure books. Those should be filled in first. Any books that are in your home that you have read and do not want, why not turn them in- to the library so that others may enjoy them.
